Letter Came From Ickes, Sparks Says

Received So-Called 'Hopkins' Missive Through Briggs, However, He Adds

By Walter Wood

C. Nelson Sparks, whose book brought the "Hopkins Letter" to national attention, yesterday issued a formal statement that the letter came to him from Interior Secretary Harold L. Ickes through the latter's aide, George N. Briggs.

Developments in the latest chapter of the letter story are these:

1. Sparks said he believed the letter, which has been declared a forgery, was authentic because he received it "through Briggs from Ickes." He said the mysterious word "Alamo" was blotted out of the letter at the request of Ickes, before its publication. This word, said Sparks, may in itself furnish the solution.

2. Secretary Ickes told reporters that Sparks seemed to be "out in front as an agent" for a group of isolationists who are "making an effort to discredit anyone who can possibly be discredited who believes in international cooperation after the war." As for the significance of the word "Alamo," Ickes said, it puzzles me like hell!"

3. The Department of Justice announced that Frank Phillips, "the oil man," would appear before the District grand jury when hearings are resumed today at 1 p. m. Briggs, suspended by Ickes, remained in seclusion and had not been subpenaed last night.

Sparks Holds Press Conference

Sparks, former Mayor of Akron, held a press conference in the Capitol yesterday at which he issued a 20-page statement on the series of letters, one of which has been branded a forgery by Harry Hopkins, presidential adviser.

In the statement Sparks said he received two letters—one bearing the letterhead, "Harry Hopkins," the other on White House stationery.

Sparks, whose book quoted an alleged letter from Hopkins to Dr. Umphrey Lee of Texas, stated:

"Briggs told me that when Ickes learned I was interested in the Hopkins angle of Willkie's global tour, he asked Briggs to find out whether I would be interested in a letter which Hopkins had written, involving Willkie . . .

Tells of Briggs Statements

"Briggs told me that, according to Ickes, when Lee received the letter from Hopkins, he sent it over to Frank Phillips, the oil man, with penciled notations calling attention to certain words and asked Phillips what was meant by these words; that Phillips, being a close friend of Ickes, brought the letter to Washington and showed it to Ickes; that Ickes asked Phillips to let him have the letter but Phillips refused, telling Ickes, 'send one of your men to Texas and I'll see that he gets the letter' . . ."

The alleged letter started with a question about what had been done in the "Alamo" matter. Dr. Lee said he never received it. Hopkins said it was a forgery and asked for the grand jury probe. Senator Langer (Republican) of North Dakota then named Briggs, 55-year-old former newspaper man, as the

Consistent Home-Front News Asked

Byrnes and Baruch Support Davis in Program Accepted By War Agencies

By Ben W. Gilbert

Elmer Davis, director of the Office of War Information, yesterday ordered military and civilian Government officials to avoid speculating as to the end of the war as part of a five-point program to guarantee the American people "accurate and consistent" news about the home front.

Davis' five-point news policy program for the home front received the approval of War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes, and Bernard M. Baruch, head of the OWM advisory unit for war and postwar adjustment policies, OWI said. It was accepted by representatives of a dozen war agencies at a meeting called by Davis.

One of the points contained an injunction against discussing the activities of other agencies "without careful coordination and clearance."

Program Set Up by Davis

Davis' program contained an analysis of what Davis said were the "facts" of developments which have been termed "reconversion" and "cutbacks," and appeared to be directed at discouraging uninformed speculation about these developments—to make it possible for all Government agencies to tell the "same story."

The five points in order:

"1. An avoidance of speculation by both military and civilian officials as to the end of the war. Such speculation is idle, must be based on assumptions; is almost certain to be inaccurate except within very broad limits. It creates either excessive confidence or fear.

"2. The probabilities with respect to pre-postwar and postwar economic developments should be discussed with great care. Predictions of economic collapse and hardship are no more plausible than predictions of unheard of prosperity; at present they are all speculation. Certainly public discussion should be encouraged, but let us talk about what we know, not about what we hope or fear.

"3. Officials must recognize the responsibilities and duties of other agencies, and should not discuss activities for which they are not responsible, or matters which overlap several agencies without careful coordination and clearance.

Production Shifts

"4. All public expressions on production shifts should fully and accurately explain the status of public policy in terms of the facts as reported to OWI by the agencies concerned.

"5. Public expressions on production cuts should fully and ac-

Novgorod Captured

Trap Closing on 250,000 Nazis Southeast of Leningrad Area

London, Jan. 20 (AP).—The Red army's six-day-old northern offensive today toppled the ancient city of Novgorod, hiked the enemy's dead and captured toll to 44,000, and crushed forward steadily to engulf many scattered German units which now are being wiped out, Moscow announced tonight.

Two powerful Soviet armies were engaged in a huge nutcracker operation which might trap 250,000 Germans southeast of Leningrad, dispatches said.

Gen. K. A. Meretskov's troops, attacking 100 miles below Leningrad, crossed the frozen Volkhov River and Lake Ilmen, surrounded Novgorod and then took that stronghold by storm. Marshal Stalin saluted the victory in an order of the day shortly after Berlin admitted its abandonment. It had been taken by the Germans in August, 1941.

To the north, Gen. Leonid A. Govorov's troops were within 9 miles of Krasnogvardeisk, rail junction controlling lines radiating to Leningrad, to the Baltic states, and eastward to the Tosno area where huge German forces hold a "V" salient which is being hit from both sides by the Russians.

Indicating great danger for all the German forces in the Leningrad area, the daily Soviet communique said Govorov's troops fighting southwestward from Leningrad had joined forces with other units advancing southeastward from the Oranienbaum bridgehead 20 miles west of Leningrad on the Gulf of Finland.

Beside the 250,000 facing a trap, an undetermined number of Nazi troops were already cut off in the Strelna corridor southwest of Leningrad by this junction of the Soviet forces at a point about 20 miles southwest of Leningrad.

Strelna itself, 5 miles southeast of Peterhof which was taken Wednesday, and 10 miles westward across the bay from Leningrad, was among the towns to fall during the day, said a Moscow communique recorded by the Soviet monitor.

The communique said many German troops trapped in the Strelna corridor had dropped down their arms and surrendered.

Besides threatening Krasnogvardeisk in this sector, the Reds are driving to cut the railway running westward from there to Reval (Tallinn) the Estonian capital. Either development would be a major strategic success.

In the twin successes of the north, the Russians said their

Capital Has 11th Raid Of 'Extermination' Drive; Nazis Claim 21 Planes Downed

London (Friday), Jan. 21 (AP).—Royal Air Force night bombers hammered Berlin last night, it was officially announced early today, in the eleventh massive attack on the greatest of German targets since the extermination campaign against the Reich capital began November 18, 1943.

The German radio said that 21 bombers were shot down—a statement which was not confirmed from Allied quarters.

The attack, in which a heavy force of Canadian bombers participated, added to approximately 14,000 (long) tons of bombs previously dropped on the German capital in 10 major assaults which have laid waste more than half the city.

A continental radio blackout suggested that a strong force of night bombers was out, probably hitting more than one target. First announcement of the Berlin raid came from the German radio.

City's 105th Raid of the War

This was the 105th raid of the war against Berlin, and the German radio indicated that the attacking force had an ideal night to carry out the assault.

Describing the blow as a "terror raid," the German broadcast declared: "In view of the weather, German authorities had expected major bomber formations would make an attack and as a result the ack-ack defenses were effective to the fullest extent from the start."

An indication of either the size or the scope of the RAF night operations was seen in the fact that broadcasting stations at Prague and Warsaw were among those included in the continental radio blackout.

New Raid on Outskirts Of Rome Reported

Algiers, Jan. 20 (AP).—The Rome radio tonight reported an Allied air attack—the second in two days—on the outskirts of Rome today, and the regular Allied communique, reporting yesterday's developments, told that for the second day the entire Allied air forces—strategic as well as tactical—concentrated on destroying Nazi airfields and communications.

Allied heavy and medium bombers struck yesterday at the most important German airdromes in the vicinity of the Italian capital. The blows were directed against the Ciampino chain of fields, just outside the city and against the nearby Centocelle field.

Rome previously was declared isolated from rail communications with the north of Italy, and German airdromes received such terrific aerial barrages that the Nazis scarcely had any fighter strength left to combat the waves of Flying Fortresses, Liberators and medium bombers.

Perugia Field Also Hit

Beside the Rome area, Lightning-escorted Liberators hammered the Perugia airfield, 85 miles to the north, scoring many hits on the runways. Rieti airdrome, 40 miles north of the capital, was believed to have been made temporarily useless after a pounding by medium Mitchells.

At Veterbo airfield, 40 miles northwest of Rome, medium Marauders were disclosed to have destroyed 30 Nazi planes in an attack that pointed up the all-out campaign to paralyze the Germans from the air and thus lighten the task of Allied ground forces in their drive on Rome.

Warhawk fighters, meanwhile, made strafing assaults on shipping at the Yugoslav port of Makarska, hitting three schooners and a tugboat, and carried out extensive sweeps over the front.

Soldier Vote Compromise Approved, 12-2

Federal Ballot Bill Gives Local Election Officials Final Say

The Senate Privileges and Elections Committee last night by a vote of 12 to 2 approved a new Federal war ballot bill which its sponsors said would assure the vote to the bulk of the United States armed forces.

The compromise bill, which, unlike the original Green-Lucas measure, gives State and local election officials final say on validation of the ballots, will be called up in the Senate early next week.

Despite Senate sidetracking of the last Federal ballot bill by a 42 to 37 vote, Senator Scott W. Lucas (Democrat) of Illinois, cosuthor of the new measure, claimed enough votes will be picked up to assure passage.

Race Developes

A race immediately developed with the House, which is waiting to act on a soldier vote bill similar to the States' right substitute first passed by the Senate.

The House measure, which would leave service voting measures strictly up to the 48 States, was reported last week by a bipartisan States' rights majority of the House Elections Committee. A House Rules Committee meeting has been called for today to give the State measure right of way in the House. There, as in the Senate, a Federal war ballot compromise will be offered as a substitute.

The Senate's second time at the bat on soldier vote legislation follows widespread complaint that the original State substitute will leave the majority of servicemen unvoted. Heavily stressed at the Senate Elections Committee's second set of hearings was the War and Navy Department finding that it would be impossible to administer a service vote law based on 48 diverse systems.

Powers Reduced

The heart of the proposed Senate compromise was contained in a revised section reducing the powers of the proposed bipartisan Federal War Ballot Commission to simple administrative functions and leaving validation of service ballots entirely up to the States and localities.

"The commission," said the bill, "shall have no powers or functions with respect to the determination of validity of ballots casts under the provisions of this title; such determination shall be made by the duly constituted election officials of the appropriate districts, precincts, counties or other voting units of the several States.

"Votes cast under the provisions of this title shall be canvassed, counted, and certified in each State by its proper canvassing boards in the same manner, as nearly as may be practicable, as the votes cast within its borders are canvassed, counted, and certified."

Satisfied with this provision, which he said accepted State val-

D. C. Woman Victim Of Gunplay; Police Find Weapon

Chicago, Jan. 20 (INS).—Scarcely more than 24 hours after she was shot by a mysterious gunwoman in her luxurious Drake Hotel suite, Mrs. Adele Born Williams, wife of State Department official, died tonight in St. Luke's Hospital.

Only an interne was present at the time of her death, which was expected.

A day of intense investigation into the shooting last night added little to discover the mysterious assailant, who merely was identified as a woman. Both Mrs. Williams, in her last lucid moments, and her daughter, Mrs. Patricia Goodbody, said the assassin was a woman. Mrs. Goodbody said at least one shot was fired at her but she escaped unhurt.

Her husband, Frank Starr Williams, former commercial attache at the American Embassy in Tokyo, was summoned to the hospital after his wife's death. He had flown to Chicago from Washington, where he and his wife lived at the Fairfax Hotel, 2100 Massachusetts ave. nw. He and Mrs. Goodbody and Elizabeth Born, both Mrs. Williams daughters by a former marriage, remained at her bedside until shortly before her death.

Coroner A. L. Brodie, who set the inquest for tomorrow, and Williams announced that his wife's body would be cremated. He said no special plans for the funeral had been made.

Mrs. Williams death climaxed a day of intense investigation. One late development turned toward Baltimore, Md. Williams told detectives that his former wife, Mrs. Mabel S. Macher, was confined in a Baltimore sanitarium, suffering from a brain disease.

Detectives said they would check with Baltimore authorities to determine whether Mrs. Macher still was there.

Previously Assistant States Attorney Wilbur F. Crowley said that he believed Mrs. Williams was wounded "by a woman seeking revenge."

Crowley refused to elaborate, but it was reported the State's attorney's office had learned that Mrs. Williams had made many women enemies.

More bizarre was the theory advanced by a family friend that Mrs. Williams was wounded by a Japanese spy or sympathizer. In support of this belief, it was pointed out that Mrs. Williams' husband had been an outspoken critic of the Japanese and had written a book unfavorable to the Japs. He had served as commercial attache at the American Embassy in Tokyo from 1938 to 1941.

The gun used in the shooting was found by hotel officers early today on the landing of a service

Committee Reverses Itself On War Profits

Compromise Changes Leave Many Basic Law Provisions Intact

The Senate Finance Committee yesterday cleared the way for an eleventh-hour peaceful settlement in the Senate today of a backstage battle over war profits that has raged in the Senate for weeks.

In an almost complete reversal of its recent call for modification of the war contract renegotiation law, the committe approved a set of compromise amendments that would leave the renegotiation law almost intact.

The committee's belated action upheld one of the five points in the President's state of the Union message, and in effect sustained the Treasury and a vocal committee minority which had charged the original renegotiation modifications opened the door to unconscionable war profits.

Sponsors Appear Satisfied

The basis for the renegotiation compromise had been laid Wednesday by a four-man Finance Subcommittee. Yesterday the full committee threshed over and revised their recommendations, and filed the new compromise with the Senate before midnight.

Senator Kenneth McKellar (Democrat) of Tennessee, Senate author of the renegotiation law, and Representative Francis Case (Republican) of South Dakota, original House proponent, said the changes "appeared satisfactory" to them.

The new amendments restored many of the provisions of the basic law, and even wiped out some of

Rabaul Airbase, Shipping Center Attacked Again

Allied Headquarters, New Guinea (Friday), Jan. 21 (AP).—Allied airmen downed 33 Japanese planes and sank three enemy supply ships totaling 10,000 tons in blows ranging from Wewak, New Guinea, to Rabaul, New Britain, Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters reported today. The Allies lost but three planes.

The heaviest raid was on the airdromes and supply dumps at Wewak and neighboring Boram. Fifty Liberator heavy bombers hit Boram with 133 tons of explosives, without interception Wednesday. The day before more than 100 Allied fighters shot down 12 of 50 to 60 Japanese interceptors. Jap fighters were in evidence over Wewak, however.

Tobera Airbase Bombed

Hitting again at the enemy plane and shipping center at Rabaul, where Allied planes sank or damaged eight ships Monday, Mitchell medium bombers with fighter escort bombed and strafed Tobera airdrome, downing 21 enemy interceptors against a loss of two of the raiding planes.

A 5000-ton Japanese ammunition ship received a direct hit and blew up and a 2000-ton freighter also was sunk when Navy Catalina patrol planes caught a small convoy off Lorengau, on the northeast coast of Admiralty Island, Tuesday night.

Night patrol planes operating off Naman Island, near Hansa Bay on the northeast coast of New Guinea, sank a 3000-ton Japanese ship.

In the Ramu Valley, inland and south of another Japanese New Guinea coastal base at Madang, medium and divebombers dumped 70 tons of explosives on enemy

Clark's Army Captures Key Italian Town

Minturno, Important Communication Center, Falls in Fierce Battle

By Wes Gallagher

Algiers, Jan. 20 (AP).—British troops fighting doggedly up 500-foot slopes rising from the historic Appian Way have driven Nazi defenders from the important town of Minturno, 2 miles from the Garigliano River, the German high command announced today, as a bitter "give and take" battle raged along a 7-mile front on the Italian west coast.

The Nazis said that Minturno, a key communications center, was lost to Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark's advancing forces after having been "completely destroyed." The ancient town, whose prewar population was more than 5000, was a primary objective of the new Allied offensive Monday night at three points across the lower Garigliano.

While the Nazis conceded Minturno's fall, the Allied command announced capture of the villages of Argento, at the mouth of the Garigliano; Tufo, a mile northeast of Minturno, and Suio, 7 miles up the Garigliano from the coast.

Since their initial landings on the western bank of the river under cover of a smoke screen the British have encountered a steady succession of mine fields and sheets of machine-gun and artillery fire. The Aurunci Mountains up which they are fighting rise at points to 3000 feet.

Furious Counterattacks

An Allied spokesman said the attacking troops were being called upon to repel furious German counterattacks. He described the fighting as of a "give and take" nature.

Some of the most desperate fighting was expected to develop around Castel Porto, a village about 2 miles from the Garigliano's western bank and 6 miles inland, where

Pool of Factors

By Robert C. Albright

Speaker Sam Rayburn of Texas yesterday stepped well out into the running for the Democratic vice presidential nomination in the second of a series of speeches that will bring him to the attention of the voters.

This interpretation was placed by his friends on a postwar plan presented by the Texan yesterday to the United States Conference of Mayors in Chicago and on his slated appearance as the principal speaker at Saturday night's Jackson day dinner here.

The latter engagement, these said, was assuredly made with the knowledge if not at the request of the President, who in past years has personally addressed the main Democratic fund-raising social event.

None here believed the President had given any formal blessing to any of the many prominent Democrats mentioned as possible running mates if the President runs again.

But if he does run, the decision on who will be second man will be his, as in 1940 when he indicated his eleventh-hour preference for Vice President Henry Wallace.

This is well understood in the party, and so widespread is the fourth term assumption that none has thrown in his cap for top place on a Democratic ticket. Meantime, despite the present ascendancy of Wallace, there is plenty of angling for second place, with every indication that the field is wide open.

Dating from an extemporaneous speech in the House last month urging "Win the War" National unity, later rebroadcast on National hook-ups, and reputedly applauded at the White House, Rayburn's vice presidential stock has been soaring among House Democrats.

Rayburn himself has declined to discuss any such ambitions with newsmen, but fellow Texans have not been so reticent. They believe

OPA Hit for Settling Kronheim Liquor Price Case at $200,000

By James E. Chinn

The OPA was severely criticized before a Senate Judiciary Subcommittee yesterday for its recent out-of-court settlement for $200,000 of the alleged liquor price ceiling violation case against Milton S. Kronheim & Son, Inc.

As a result, the OPA was ordered to produce for examination the entire record in the case.

The attack on the OPA was made by Senators Wherry of Nebraska and Ferguson of Michigan (Republicans) during cross-examination of Harold Epstein, chief of the agriculture conservation branch of the food enforcement division. Both wanted to know why the Department of Justice's advice was not sought as to the possibility of criminal prosecution.

Epstein's explanation was that the OPA did not take all of its cases to court, and in the Kronheim instance it chose the course of civil sanction.

"It seems to me a case involving $200,000 would have criminal violations sticking out all over it," declared Wherry. "I think that case certainly should have been referred to the Department of Justice before steps were taken to settle it out of court. If you're going to stop this sort of thing you've got to put some of the boys behind the bars."

"We have bootlegging in liquor again," said Ferguson, "and yet we find the Government making settlements here without going to the Department of Justice."

Epstein admitted that if the OPA had taken the case to court it could have "substantiated" a claim for $225,000, an amount

Room For 2000 WAVES

Army Battles Navy's Demand For Arlington Farms Space

Rough water ahead for the Navy's distaff fleet was the forecast yesterday as landlubber war agencies revealed that they will fight to the finish to preserve their own employes' docking privileges in Arlington Farms residence halls.

Secretary of War Stimson himself is reviewing the situation, and the Bureau of the Budget and National Housing Agency have been asked by the War Department to re-examine all Arlington Farms data. If these two agencies then decide in favor of the Navy, said an Army spokesman, the War Department is willing to cede.

Faced with an invasion of 2000 enlisted WAVES in the Federal Works Agency-operated Girls' Town, other Government offices protested that they thus will be unable to live up to commitments to more than 1000 prospective Federal employes recruited from the hinterland with promises of quarters in the superdeluxe residence halls.

The War Department claimed that it has made such commitments to 760 girls, that there are now no more than 900 vacancies at Arlington Farms, and that if the WAVES were to move in now, several hundred of the present tenants would be forced to get out.

The Navy, however, supported by the National Housing Agency, painted a far happier picture. Spokesmen claimed that the number of vacancies was closer to 1400 and that 1200 alloted to femme sailors would leave 200 rooms to fill other agencies' commitments.

The reason that more WAVES can be put into less barracks space than their mufti-clad compatriots, it was pointed out, is that the Navy removes the walls—er, bulkheads—

War Sidelights

All Civilians Reported Out Of Helgoland

London, Jan. 20 (AP).—The Berlin radio said today that all civilians have been evacuated from Helgoland, the Germans' great North Sea Island fortress of World War I which they were generally believed to have fortified later in defiance of the Versailles Treaty.

Commanding the mouths of the Weser and Elbe Rivers, the island lies 28 miles off the northwest corner of the German mainland and is a defensive outpost for the ports and shipbuilding centers of Hamburg, Bremen and Cuxhaven and for the Kiel Canal.

Nazis Protest to Tokyo

Stockholm, Jan. 20 (AP).—The Goeteborg newspaper Handels-Och-Sjoefartstidning reported today that the German Ambassador in Tokyo had lodged a strong protest with the Japanese government against the arrest of a number of German engineers and technicians connected with I. G. Farbenindustrie in the Far East.

Seasickness Preventive

London, Jan. 20 (AP).—Trials with boatloads of landlubbers in rough weather have disclosed that the drug hyoscine of the belladonna group prevented seasickness in 73 out of 100 men, medical investigators for Allied invasion forces reported today.

Polish Guerillas Active

New York, Jan. 20 (AP).—The Polish Telegraph Agency said today that Polish underground forces had penetrated into East Prussia, in Germany, and "inflicted heavy casualties on Nazi troops in a series of battles which lasted several days." The Polish agency also said that guerillas had fought Nazi troops in Praga, a suburb of Warsaw.

the Germans have installed extensive fortifications on high ground.

German prisoners taken at the outset of the offensive belonged to the Ninety-fourth Nazi Division, and many said they had never been in action before. They showed strain from the incessant aerial attacks and artillery bombardments they had undergone in recent years.

It was disclosed officially that Monday night's smash across the Garigliano was accompanied by an amphibious operation that landed Allied troops behind the enemy's lines on the Gulf of Gaeta.

(A German correspondent reported that American troops were being landed at several points along the Gulf of Gaeta, but there was no indication from Allied sources that American units were involved in the new offensive.)

American and French patrols continued to feel out the enemy's powerful defenses before Cassino, 20 miles inland from the Mediterranean, while American artillery maintained a drumfire against the town itself and against Nazi emplacements on a mountain behind it.

Front dispatches confirmed reports that an attack launched Monday by Canadian troops near the Adriatic end of the battle line was thrown back by strong German counterattacks.

It was announced that among British regiments fighting in Italy is the King's Own Yorkshire Light Infantry, but there was no indication whether it was engaged in the current offensive of the Fifth Army.

Partisans Strike Foe in Nine Sectors, Communique Says

London, Jan. 20 (AP).—Marshal Josip Broz (Tito) asesrted today that his Liberation Army—now threatening the important Nazi naval base at Fiume from two directions—had struck the Germans in nine sectors in battle-torn Yugoslavia and killed more than 1700 of the invaders.

The heaviest fighting was spreading along the Croat coastal area below Fiume, said Tito's broadcast communique.

In this region, Tito's Partisans were locked in fierce engagements with Nazi divisions attempting to thrust north from Gospic, 12 miles from the Adriatic coast in western Lika Province, toward Otocac.

Otocac itself is only 60 miles southeast of Fiume, a major Nazi position in the upper Adriatic. Tito's forces also are approximately the same distance east of Fiume in the Kocevje (Gottschee) area. They also threatened the city to the east in the Ogulin-Karlovac sector, where they were some 40 miles away.

In the Ogulin-Karlovac area units of the 370th German Division were defeated with heavy losses, the communique said.

Hard fighting was reported in western Bosnia, where other German forces apparently were attempting to drive through toward the Adriatic from the town of Mrkonjecgrad.

More than 400 German officers and men were declared to have been killed when Tito's forces attacked German motorized columns near Ljubljana, Slovenian city 35 miles from the Italian frontier.

Three hundred Germans were reported killed in continuous fighting around the town of Gacko in Hercegovnia, while the same number of Germans were said to have been killed in fighting in central Bosnia.

troops on the Leningrad front in six days had killed 25,000 Germans and captured 1000. This raised the toll of German dead 5000 above the 20,000 killed announced by Moscow Wednesday.

An additional 15,000 Germans were slain and 3000 captured by General Meretskov's armies of the Volkhov front, Moscow said.

Nazis Hurled Back

Soviet troops now have hurled the Germans back 15 or more miles from Leningrad's outskirts, overrunning artillery batteries which had been methodically shelling it.

Govorov's troops which had seized Krasnoye Selo, 15 miles below Leningrad, on Wednesday, pushed on westward to join the forces advancing from Ropsha, 9 miles to the west, also taken Wednesday. The junction apparently occurred at Alekuila, two miles east of Ropsha, for the broadcast communique gave Alekuila as one of more than a score of towns overrun.

North of Alekuila the Russians were surrounding and wiping out scattered groups of Germans who had been holding a corridor running to the Gulf of Finland at a point southwest of Leningrad.

Rail Station Captured

The same thing was happening in the forests west of captured Novogorod, far to the south, the bulletin said. Besides Novogorod, the Russians took Nashchi, rail station 10 miles west on the line running to Batetskaya, which is on the Leningrad-Odessa line. This put Russian troops less than 30 miles from Batetskaya, whose seizure would plug one of the escape hatches for the huge German forces below Leningrad.

The German command in one of its typical announcements broke the news of Novgorod's fall, saying the city was evacuated "in the course of local operations to shorten the front."

Statement Amplified

"In accordance with the principle of elastic defense, the German army command ordered the withdrawal of German lines to the west of the town of Novgorod because the Soviets lined up there masses of artillery which almost completely dominated this place.

"In this sector, as well as to the south of Leningrad and south of Oranienbaum (west of Leningrad), violent defensive fighting continues undiminished."

The Nazi armies captured Novgorod on August 22, 1941, two months to the day after the invasion of Russia, and had held it since. The Russians in their offensive of last winter reached the vicinity but were unable then to dislodge the foe.

Red Successes Stir Finnish Peace Debate

London, Jan. 20 (AP).—The Red army successes in the Leningrad area gave fresh impetus to speculation here tonight that Finland might make direct peace overtures soon to Russia.

Even before the Russians launched their offensive below Leningrad the Finnish official radio Lahti had been quoted in Stockholm dispatches as saying on January 7 that "Finland wants peace and is willing to make peace."

The broadcast hedged, however, by saying that the Finns first wanted to hear Russia's terms.

In view of the new military turn, many in London would not be surprised if the Finns swallowed their pride and approached the Russians. A hindrance to an open Finnish peace bid, though, is the presence of perhaps 70,000 to 80,000 German troops based in Finland.

A Finnish withdrawal from the war obviously would be a great strategic and propaganda victory for the Allies. It would remove the land threat in the north to Russia's port at Murmansk, relieve the pressure on Leningrad from the north and northwest, and give the Soviet Baltic fleet more freedom. It also would expose German troops in northern Norway to an attack from the rear.

Allied Forces Break Out New Burma Front

New Dehli, Jan. 20 (AP).—Allied ground forces, moving up behind heavy assaults by American heavy and medium bombers, have opened a new north Burma land front in attacks on Japanese positions in the Chindwin area.

In announcing the attacks, launched Tuesday, today's Allied East Asia headquarters communique said only that "some progress was made."

The Japanese positions in the Kyanshaw area 18 miles southeast of Tamu on the western border, lie more than 200 miles below the Hukawng Valley area, where American trained Chinese troops are driving eastward along the route of the new Ledo road to China.

A successful drive eastward from Kyankahaw across the upper Chindwin River Valley would sever the enemy's main communications between his central and northern forces.

The land attack followed an assault Monday by a large formation of American heavy and medium bombers on a Japanese troop camp at Kyankshaw, the announcement said.

To the south, other Allied forces holding new advance positions on the Arakan front successfully beat off Japanese counterattacks against river bridges south and east of Maungdaw.

Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's Chinese forces clearing out the Japanese ahead of engineers carving out the new "Burma Road" to China captured the enemy-held village of Gumga in the Hukawng Valley and drove on eastward across the Tanai River.

American and RAF bombers, fighter-bombers and fighters continued their heavy attacks on Japanese shipping and communications.

positions along the upper Faria River.

This was in the area where Australian jungle fighters are working toward Bogadjim and the Madang base.

Australian troops moving up the Huon Peninsula coast, New Guinea, toward the American invasion force around Saidor continued mopping up Japanese stragglers in the Sio area.

Ten enemy barges were destroyed or damaged in Allied strafing sweeps along the coasts of New Britain, near Rein Bay and Arawe, on the north and south side of the island, respectively.

Jap-Americans In Draft Again

American citizens of Japanese descent again will be brought under the Selective Service program.

The War Department said yesterday that Japanese-Americans considered acceptable for military service will be reclassified by their draf boards on the same basis as other citizens. None has been drafted since February, 1942.

The announcement said that "the excellent showing" which the 442d combat team has made in training and the "outstanding record" achieved by the Forty-fourth Battalion now fighting in Italy, both composed of Japanese-American volunteers, were major factors in the decision to reinstate Selective Service for citizens of Japanese descent.

Nazi Plane Strength in West Estimated as High as 2500

London, Jan. 20 (AP).—The German air force may be able to concentrate 2500 planes in the west to meet an Allied invasion of Europe, the magazine Aeroplane said today in a summary based on a two-year study of German press and radio reports.

The number might be smaller, the magazine said, if the Allies compel the German high command to disperse their forces by diversionary attacks.

About 1200 of the Nazis' 1700 to 1800 day and night fighters, including some 150 two-engined rocket carriers, now are facing British and American air units stationed in Britain, Aeroplane said.

From the ability of Allied bombers to reach German targets and obliterate them, it is apparent that this strength is insufficient, particularly since the Germans must protect an area from Biarritz in the southwest to the North Cape in the North, and extending inland to Leipzig.

The magazine estimates that about 400 German fighters are stationed along the Russian front and perhaps 200 spread over Italy, the Balkans and southern Germany.

"Betwen 4 and 5 of the 17 bomber groups of the Luftwaffe already are in the west and a great number have been used for fighting or intruder operations in the past few months," Aeroplane said. "There is no doubt that of the seven bomber groups in the East or the five in the Mediterranean, between one and three can be spared for the northwestern front when the Allies open the invasion."

A German report that the Nazis have 10,000 first line bombers within striking distance of British nerve centers, ready to be used for concentrated 1000-bomber raids nightly, was disparaged.

U. S. Casualties More Than 140,000 Since War Began

By the Associated Press

Casualties totaling more than 140,000 have been suffered by the American armed forces since the start of the war.

The Navy has reported 35,257 casualties since the start of the war in all its branches—25,225 in the Navy, 9590 in the Marine Corps, and 442 in the Coast Guard.

The totals are divided as follows:

Army casualties, all theaters, through December 23—Killed, 16,831; wounded, 38,916; missing, 24,067; prisoners of war, 25,415.

(Army casualties in Italy to date—Killed, 2985; wounded, 12,504; missing, 3721.)

Navy casualties—Killed, 11,976; wounded, 3136; missing, 7778; prisoners, 2335.

Coast Guard — Killed, 316; wounded, 78; missing, 47; prisoner, 1.

Accidents Kill 7000 More Than Wounds

Wartime industrial accidents killed 7000 more persons than battle wounds up to January 1.

Workingmen's injuries since Pearl Harbor are responsible for the loss of four tmies as many manhours of production as strikes.

The damage and destruction of equipment in workers' accidents "far exceeds the value of American cargoes that have been sunk."

Lost work time from one-the-job accidents totals 450 million mandays, enough to have built 7500 average size merchant ships.

The Office of War Information in presenting these figures yesterday, declared accidents in war plants are "a major production and manpower problem."

Stoker Sees Dynamite In Coal Just in Time

New York, Jan. 20 (INS).—John Ozbort, 55-year-old stoker in a midtown apartment house, paused in mid-swing today, put the shovel down, gently, removed an object some 8 inches long and 1 inch in diameter. Then he wiped the perspiration from his brow—and dashed for a telephone to call police.

Police bomb squad identified the object as a stick of dynamite. It was assumed the dynamite must have been dropped by a digger at the mine, and somehow overlooked in transportation.

Churchill Enters Polish Border Talks

London, Jan. 20 (AP).—Prime Minister Churchill entered into discussion of the Russian-Polish border dispute today and, with Foreign Secretary Eden, conferred with the leaders of the Polish government in London.

Churchill and Eden saw Premier Stanislaw Mikolajczyk and Foreign Minister Tadeusz Romer to discuss the troublous issue, which had seemed to be at an impasse after successive public statements by Moscow and the Polish government in London.

Britain is known to be willing to act as mediator, along with the United States, if invited by both parties. Poland has proposed such mediation, but the Soviet government has not supported the move.

It is generally believed that an attempt will be made to carry on negotiations through third parties without any public statements.

Replying to Moscow's suggestion that the Curzon line be used as a basis of negotiations, the Polish government in London last week proposed mediation by Britain and the United States.

To this Moscow replied that it interpreted the Polish government as a rejection of the Curzon line suggestion.

Davis Calls Halt On War Guessing

curately explain the status of public policy in terms of facts reported to OWI by the agencies concorned."

Davis opened the meeting with the statement:

"The theory on which any democracy must fight a war is that when the people know what is expected of them, and why, and are convinced that it makes sense, they will do whatever is necessary.

"The Office of War Information is cooperating with the Army and Navy public relations bureaus to help see that the news of military operations is brought to the people just as fast and fully as genuine considerations of military security will permit. I hope we can all keep together to see that the flow of governmental news on the home front is accurate and consistent, so that the people will understand what is asked of them and the reasons."

Davis called for careful use of such terms as "cutbacks" and "conversion," stating that the latter usually has been used inaccurately, covering paper changes to actual plant closing, and the manufacture of bobby pins to the disposal of Government-owned plants.

Among the facts about "conversion" was the flat statement that "no extensive resumption of civilian production is possible at this time. . . . The minor shifts now occurring are very small, almost inconsequential, and are essential to the maintenance of a war economy. . . . We are planning in order to be able to shift to civilian production as quickly as possible when military conditions permit.

"Unexpected military developments make planning very difficult, and we cannot expect to meet all eventualities. Short term shocks are likely. Generally, however, employment slacks, unlikely for a long time, should be absorbed by production shifts without delay. Civilian purchasing power and our great production capacity will form a strong foundation for major conversion where it becomes possible.

Agencies represented at Davis' conference included: War, Navy, Commerce Department, Office of War Mobilization, War Production Board, War Labor Board, Maritime Commission, Foreign Economic Administration, War Food Administration, Selective Service, War Manpower Commission and Office of Defense Transportation.

idation principles incorporated in his own Federal War ballot compromise, Senator Tydings (Democrat) of Maryland announced he would withdraw his own bill.

Senators Austin of Vermont and Lodge of Massachusetts (Republicans), who had joined in another proposed compromise extending the special Federal ballot only to servicemen overseas, indicated they also would drop their own measure and support the committee bill.

The two Senators casting "no" ballots were Senators Revercomb of West Virginia and Moore of Oklahoma (Republicans).

The 12 voting for the new Green-Lucas compromise were Green of Rhode Island; Connally of Texas; Hatch of New Mexico (by proxy); Mead of New York (by proxy); Stewart of Tennessee; Chandler of Kentucky; Tunnell of Delaware; Kilgore of West Virginia and Murdock of Utah (Democrats), and Austin of Vermont; Butler of Nebraska and Ferguson of Michigan (Republicans.)

Connally indicated at least some shift in Southern sentiment, predominantly against a Federal ballot bill, when he said he would support the measure: "The Federal Government took these people away from their homes where they could ordinarily vote, and should have the power to take the vote to them," said Connally.

2 Washington Men Among Casualties

Sergt. William D. Boyce, 20-year-old Liberator gunner, has been seriously wounded in action over Germany, and a former Washington man was killed in Sicily, it was learned here yesterday.

BOYCE

Sergeant Boyce, the son of Mrs. Mary Greenwald Boyce, 1632 P st. nw., went overseas three months ago after 14 months' training. He was mentioned in an Associated Press dispatch on December 23 as one of the gunners in a bombing raid on Augsberg.

A native Washingtonian, Sergeant Boyce attended Immaculate Conception School and was graduated from Central High School. A younger brother, Edward, 17, is a seaman, first class, stationed in North Africa.

Killed in action with an armored field artillery unit in Sicily was Capt. Walter Norris Mason, jr., of Norfolk, one-time representative here for the Frigidaire division of General Motors.

Captain Mason was a graduate of V. M. I., and was living in Hagerstown when he was called into service, December 7, 1942. He is survived by his wife, Margaret Priest Mason, and two sons.

'Annie Oakley Of Split' Is Slayer Of 72 Germans

Somewhere in Egypt, Jan. 17 (Delayed) (AP).—A 17-year-old Dalmation girl who says she killed 72 Germans and she don't know how many Italians in two years of fighting near her home, has been nicknamed "Annie Oakley of Split" by Allied soldiers stationed at a camp of Yugoslav refugees here.

Her real name is Anka, which translated means Annie, and she is one of the most colorful personalities in this tented desert camp set up as the first haven in the Middle East for war-stricken Yugoslavs.

A sort, stocky youngster with curly dark hair, Anka had fought continuously with the guerillas in the neighborhood of Split since she was 15 years old, the age all eligible partisan children join the army.

Bloc Moves to Cut UNRRA Donation

Sumner and Fish Lead Vociferous Group in Attack

By Christine Sadler

A small-but-loud group of House members, critical of Administration policy, launched a move yesterday to restrict this country's participation in the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration by halving the appropriation of $1,350,000,000 proposed for its work and by questioning the constitutionality of all UNRRA efforts to date.

Led by Representatives Sumner (Republican) of Illinois and Fish (Republican) of New York the bloc sought to curb America's efforts to aid the peoples of war-devastated lands as spelled out in a joint resolution reported to the floor by a unanimous vote of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

Miss Sumner declared UNRRA would "help make Stalin dictator of Europe." She said he would control the distribution of relief supplies in "most" of the liberated countries.

Fish praised her "American speech" and declared he has always "admired Churchill and Stalin because they always put their own countries first."

Joining in the bitter-worded fray, Representative Gearhart (Republican) of California questioned the measure's constitutionality by arguing the agreement for United States participation in UNRRA constituted a treaty which should be submitted to the Senate for a two-thirds vote of approval.

He left the floor while Chairman Bloom of the Foreign Affairs Committee was replying that only the Senate had the right to decide "when an agreement is a treaty, and this came to us from the Senate."

An appeal for UNRRA approval came from Representative Eaton of New Jersey, ranking Republican member of the Foreign Affairs Committee, who asked the House to demonstrate anew its belief in international collaboration by approving the resolution—which he declared had received the most careful consideration he had seen devoted to a measure "during my 30 years in Congress."

Obviously angry after Fish's remarks and apparently interpreting them as an attack on his own views, Eaton strode to the front and snapped: "I'm as good an American as you are."

Representative Wadsworth (Republican) of New York and Representative Johnson (Democrat) of Texas arose constantly to defend the resolution by explaining its provisions and answering queries directed at Chairman Bloom.

"If this country should fail to make an appropriation," Wadsworth said, "UNRRA would go ahead without it. One of the main purposes of the agreement is to insure an equitable distribution of supplies so countries left without money will be assured relief and rehabilitation."

Bloom explained no country would receive financial benefits from UNRRA "as long as that country has money it can use for dollar exchange in this country." He estimated even the poorest country would furnish at least 90 per cent of the cost of its rehabilitation.

through a congressional investigation "because the New Deal refuses to make the accurate figures public."

He said as a consequence of United States spending, the Latin Americans "are liking us less."

"We should stop trying to be rich uncle to Latin America. We would insist that, according to their ability to pay, what we do for the nations of Latin America is matched, dollar for dollar, by what Latin America does for itself."

It's a Game

Truth Is, Ruth Is 'Fur' Ahead Of Topping

JACK TOPPING
He Lost $12,000

New York, Jan. 20 (INS).—According to Hoyle it is chemin-de-fer. According to Ruth Waldo it is chemin-de-fur. And thereby hangs a tail—mink.

The game, by any name, took place in a New York hotel last September 19. No game warden was present but it was, according to Jack Topping, open season on Jack Topping, a character of 260 pounds, a copper-mine fortune, a sister-in-law named Sonja Henie and a girl friend named Ruth Waldo.

Some of the details, as revealed in Traffic Court today, are rather hazy but it was established that a man named Ray Ryan got Topping's goat and Miss Waldo got his coat—a $3000 mink wrap.

Miss Waldo, former secretary to the mayor of Columbus, Ohio, admitted she had been with Topping the night of the game and as a memento received the mink coat.

Miss Waldo was an innocent kibitzer the night of September 19 and when he won $3000 in the early stages of the game he promised to buy her a fur coat—and did.

It was after he took Miss Waldo home, to an apartment she shares with Miss "Choo-choo" Johnson, Broadway actress, that Topping's luck changed. He returned to the game and promptly lost $12,000, though he admits having recouped most of these losses by stopping payments on the checks.

Topping was savagely cross-examined today by Louis B. Brodsky, representing Aaron Schwartz, the only one on trial, who is accused of operating the chemin-de-fer-or-fur game.

Among exhibits was a Topping check made out to Ryan for $2000 in which the payee apparently was written, "Ray Lever Ryan."

"Look at that 'e' in 'Lever,'" Brodsky insisted. "It looks like an 'o', doesn't it?"

"It looks like it," Topping admitted.

"Then it is 'Lover,' isn't it?" Brodsky asked.

Topping confessed that it was.

"You were still drunk then?" Brodsky lashed out. Earlier Miss Waldo testified Topping had five or six drinks of Scotch and soda but was not intoxicated.

Topping did not reply.

Both sides then rested and Magistrate Harry G. Andrews reserved decision pending the filing of briefs February 10.

Completely ignored was A. Schwartz.

which represented triple damages, since the alleged overcharges in the Kronheim case were placed at about $78,000.

After Epstein had made passing reference to one case involving an overcharge of $300 which OPA had prosecuted in court, Ferguson remarked:

"Doesn't it seem strange that a $300 case is taken to court and a $200,000 case is settled out of court?"

Chairman Van Nuys was critical of socalled "tie-in" sales by which a purchaser is required to buy a bottle of wine or gin to get a bottle of whisky. He said he had been told it was a "common practice" in Chicago for dealers to force purchasers to buy a basket containing gin and wine and only one bottle of whisky.

Epstein said such sales were violations of OPA regulations and promised to have inspectors make a check-up in Chicago.

'Home-Rule' Ideas Will Be Reviewed

Senator McCarran (Democrat) of Nevada, said yesterday he would urge the Senate District subcommittee handling his so-called "home rule" bill to "go slow" in making any revisions.

The subcommittee will meet at 10:30 a. m. Tuesday to resume consideration of the measure and review some of the changes suggested during public hearing on it last month.

McCarran has prepared a report listing the proposed modifications which he declined to make public in advance of the meeting.

staircase between the third and fourth floors of the hotel. It had no fingerprints.

Police were puzzled over the fact the gun was not discovered until some 11 hours after the shooting, although police had searched the hotel thoroughly.

The absence of a clear motive mystified police, but some officers were inclined to believe the assailent intended to loot the apartment in which, it was learned, there were valuable furs and jewelry.

Mrs. Williams and her daughter told almost identical stories of the shooting, which were partially substantiated by two witnesses.

They said they returned to the hotel at 6:05 o'clock last night; found the door to the apartment unlocked, but attributed the fact to a maid's carelessness. After conversing in the living room for 20 minutes, Mrs Goodbody went into the bathroom and suddenly called out:

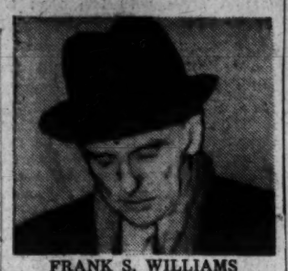
"Mother, somebody else is in this apartment."

As she cried out, she told police, a middle-aged woman, wearing a Persian lamb coat, stepped from behind the bathroom door and twice fired at her, shouting: "I'll get you, I'll get you."

Then the woman ran into the living room and fired twice at Mrs. Williams. One bullet missed, but the other struck the 54-year-old woman.

Two guests in an adjoining apartment verified the story in part.

Clyde P. Brewster, a Lancaster,



FRANK S. WILLIAMS

Pa., manufacturer, and Stanley Cook of Chicago, Midwest representative of Brewster's firm, were just leaving their apartment, they told police, when they heard shots.

"A few seconds later I saw a woman half running down the hallway," Brewster said.

"A second later Mrs. Goodbody ran into the hall, shouting that her mother had been shot."

Brewster and Cook agreed that the woman they saw running in the corridor corresponded with the description of their assailant given by Mrs. Williams and Mrs. Goodbody.

On a key ring found in a dresser drawer in the Williams suite police found a safety deposit box key bearing bright red stains. They were attempting to determine if the stains were blood. They also were tracing a rumor that three days ago Mrs. Williams was seen at a Drake Hotel bar with a woman answering the available description of the stranger seen fleeing after the shooting.

Nomination Bid Seen in Rayburn Talks

his speech in Chicago last night and his Saturday night appearance before party chiefs here assembled points only one way—to a serious play by the Speaker for the job formerly held by his close friend and fellow Texan, John Garner.

To the mayors in Chicago last night Rayburn unfolded a plan for a special committee to be appointed by him in the House next week to work closely with Government agencies, mayors, governors, county agents, labor and farm organizations and business groups in charting a "hard-headed, practical" postwar plan.

"I don't think any superplanning agency, dealing in broad generalities and theories, can do the job," Rayburn said.

The Speaker said his essential idea is to get the greatest possible number of public officials, businessmen, farm and labor leaders attacking the problem in concert and "obviously the 435 elected Representatives of the House constitute a most appropriate agency of the Federal Government from that standpoint."

Next week, he said, he will appoint a nonpartisan "Special House Committee on Postwar Fact Finding" to assemble in one common pool all vital postwar data, and later to recommend a policy and offer legislation to give it life.

He said the new House committee will go into:

1. Conversion speeds, unemployment, and rate of reemployment.

2. Allocation of materials; selection of categories to which critical materials should go first.

3. Public works, Federal, State and local.

4. New fields of enterprise; the speed at which they can be put in operation; and their labor-absorbing quotient.

5. Resumption of foreign trade; the possibility of new world markets; coordination with rehabilitation efforts.

6. Release of surplus war commodities by the Government; the channeling of their sale to minimize the economic impact, while protecting public interest.

7. Examination of Federal statutes to learn which will retard and which will aid successful postwar conversion.

Arrangements for tomorrow night's Jackson Day dinner have formally been announced, but Rayburn, first slated as master of ceremonies, will be chief speaker. Many another vice presidential prospect besides Rayburn will be present, from Vice President Wallace to Senators Truman of Missouri and Lucas of Illinois and others. Democrats will be watching the applause meter.

Some "surprises" were promised which may turn the dinner into a real harmony demonstration. These may include the appearance of former Democratic National Committee Chairman Jim Farley, long estranged from the Administration.

the renegotiation law modifications already approved by the House.

The Compromise Proposals

The committee's proposed compromise:

1. Instead of exempting mandatorily renegotiation of contracts for standard commercial articles, the committee followed the House recommendation leaving exemption of such contracts discretionary with the War Price Adjustment Board.

2. Eliminated the Senate committee and House provision retroactively exempting subcontracts on articles which are not physically incorporated in the finished contract article. An exception was made in the case of certain types of machine tools, which were exempted.

3. Abandoned a Senate committee amendment exempting from renegotiation contracts covering items furnished in obedience to WPA directives.

4. Gave contractors who are dissatisfied with their renegotiation contracts the right to "de novo" appeal to the Court of Claims, but only in unilateral cases not already closed by mutual agreement. These cases were said to be few. The original amendments permitted court review of both classes.

5. Modified an amendment requiring the board to consider a firm's financial problems in renegotiating contracts but required that the board weigh a company's problem of reconversion to peacetime production.

6. Fixed December 31, 1944, as the discretionary "cut-off" date for the renegotiation law, giving the President authority to terminate the law six months earlier or six months later than that date if conditions warrant.

7. Continued the House and Senate committee exemption of agricultural products from renegotiation. A similar exemption for canned vegetables and fruits was stricken out, but processed dairy products were exempted.

Probers Air FBI Use of FCC Prints

Hoover Fends Off Cross-Questioning At Hearing

By the Associated Press

J. Edgar Hoover fended off a two-hour question barrage about his FBI's relations with the Federal Communications Commission yesterday, telling a House committee that a presidential order prevents him from discussing matters affecting national security.

But that did not keep Eugene L. Garey, counsel for the Lea Committee Investigating the FCC, from reading a series of letters between Chairman James P. Fly of the commission, Attorney General Biddle and Hoover about the FBI's efforts to secure some 250,000 fingerprints of radio and communications workers from FCC files prior to the Pearly Harbor attack.

Nor did it keep Garey from getting into the record other questions to Hoover, although the reply was a monotonous "I have been advised to decline to answer."

Questions Listed

Among the questions put to Hoover;

Did he recall that the FCC had issued a new rule requiring communications companies to destroy records of telegrams within three months after they had been transmitted?

Had there been any discussion with the Army and Navy of the "disastrous effects" this reported order had on military intelligence work?

Was he familiar with Chairman Fly's opposition to the Army and Navy having the right to tap wires?

Did the FCC extend to the FBI the same cooperation Hoover has said that he was given by the Army and Navy?

Biddle Ruling Sought

Chairman Lea (Democrat) of California told the witness that the President had no authority to grant a blanket exemption to keep the witness from testifying, and Hugh B. Cox, Assistant Attorney General, was asked to confer with Biddle on the scope of the President's directive, which the Army and Navy also have invoked before the committee.

Garey read a series of letters to show that the FCC reluctantly turned over to the FBI some 250,000 fingerprint records of radio operators and similar workers.

Hoover told the committee that he wanted the fingerprints and accompanying records as a means of checking on the communications people.

Garey read one letter from Fly to Hoover, dated October 18, 1941, which said the operators' fingerprints had been obtained as part of a citizenship investigation and that to turn them over to the FBI would be regarded as a breach of good faith.

In another letter, dated January 2, 1942, Biddle wrote Fly, again asking for the fingerprints, adding that the "evidence is strong that messages have been surreptitiously transmitted to our enemy by radio."

Minority Leader

Sen. White Approved For New Post

Senate Republicans affirmed yesterday the action of Minority Leader McNary (Oregon), in designating Senator White of Maine as acting leader during McNary's illness, but delayed a decision on a proposed reorganization of their machinery.

White said the conference adopted a resolution by Senator Taft (Republican) of Ohio expressing confidence in McNary's leadership and requesting White to continue as acting minority leader until the Oregon Senator returns to his duties. McNary is recuperating in Florida after a brain operation.

On motion of Senator Willis of Indiana, the conference directed White to appoint a committee of five to study "the needs of the Republican Party in the Senate" and to report back to the group next Thursday.

With the comment that "we're getting ready to take over the control of the Senate," White said this group would study the question of electing a conference chairman, whip and naming a steering committee to formulate legislative policies.

Stripping Agencies Of Franking Urged

The Byrd Committee asked Congress yesterday to strip Federal Government departments of their free mailing privilege—an action that would boost the postoffice revenue by an estimated 30 million dollars this year.

The recommendation made a war-time exception for the War and Navy Department, the Treasury and Selective Service. In a special report on postage-free Government mail, the committee said the volume had tripled in 10 years and now amounts to two billion pieces a year.

and installs double-decker bunks. Hence the 2000 could move into 1200 rooms and leave the margin cited.

Turnover Rate High

Also, asserted the Navy, the turnover rate at Arlington Farms is so high—300 to 400 monthly—that exiting civilians would leave ample room for WAVES, incoming residents and present tenants.

To this, the Public Buildings Administration countered that the turnover rate used to be high because Arlington Farms in its infancy accepted transient guests if they fulfilled other requirements. Now the list of occupants has became stable, as the six residence halls have filled, and the turnover is reduced to "almost nothing," claims PBA.

So crucial is the housing situation that girls who arrive today will find the proverbial welcome mat jerked from beneath their feet at the end of two weeks. Last night was the deadline on permanent accommodations; pending settlement of l'Affaire WAVES, arrangements from here on in will be temporary.

Must Go Elsewhere

At the end of the fortnight granted them civilian arrivals are expected to find homes elsewhere—sans such Arlington Farms attractions as swimming pool, beauty shop, cafeteria, bowling alleys, free hospital, dress shop, postoffice, dating booths, educational courses and recreational facilities within a few moments' walk, all for Government girls earning $1800 annually or less.

The Navy, during the next six weeks, expects that sufficient Arlington Farms dwellers will take up residence in some of the 4000 to 5000 "inspected" rooms which NHA says are available in the Capital, to free 1200 rooms for WAVE occupancy.

Letter Came From Ickes, Sparks Claims

one who turned up the letter for Sparks.

"Alamo" was said by Langer to be the code word for an Administration move to back Dr. Lee for the United States Senate against Senator Connally (Democrat) of Texas.

Sparks said Hopkins, Lee nad Ickes "should be questioned closely as to the meaning of the word 'Alamo' appearing in the Hopkins letter . . ."

Sparks said he deleted the word from the letter, as published in his book, "at the urgent request of Ickes, conveyed to me by letter from Briggs at the last moment before publication.

Calls Briggs "Trusted Friend"

"This word in itself may furnish the key to the frantic attempt on the part of these men to disown any connection with the letter and any knowledge of it."

Describing Briggs as a "trusted friend," Sparks in his statement declared: "Once the authenticity of these letters, telegrams and other documents emanating from Briggs is established, any reasonable man reading them would believe that Hopkins wrote, and Lee received, the letter as published in my book."

Sparks said the originals of all the documents he had are in possession of the Justice Department, but that he retained photostats of all of them. He referred to a statement by Henry Schweinhaut, special assistant to the Attorney General, that the signature of the White House stationery is a forgery.

Believed It Genuine, He Says

"Maybe so," said Sparks. "I assume such a statement would not be made by a responsible official without some basis for it.

"If it is a forgery, I was not aware of it, since I have had complete confidence in its genuineness at all times since I received it on December 21, 1943, because of the circumstances under which I received it from Briggs, and through Briggs from Ickes . . .

"If it is not genuine it constitutes one of the most contemptible and duplicitous examples of double-dealing I have ever encountered, certainly by Briggs, and, I believe, also by Ickes."

In conclusion, Sparks stated:

"The only explanation I can conceive is that they have been forced to indulge in trickery for the sake of covering up Ickes' tracks on his activities in exposing a fellow member of the Administration's inner circle, Hopkins, against whom, I have heard, Ickes entertains something less than the best of feelings."

Ickes Sees Isolationist Plot

Earlier in the day Secretary Ickes, at his press conference in the Interior Building, told reporters:

"I am beginning to see a very clear effort on the part of isolationists—particularly that group organized in Chicago, the Republican Revivalist Committee, under sponsorship of Colonel McCormick (Col. Robert McCormick, publisher of the Chicago Tribune), before which Sparks spoke prior to coming to Washington to appear before the grand jury—an effort to discredit anyone who believes in international cooperation after the war."

Ickes said he didn't know whether "the Hopkins letter episode was part of this effort," but declared that Sparks was "more interested in activities having a bearing on international affairs than he is on any domestic issue."

The Cabinet member, who broke his collarbone last week in a fall at his Ashland, Md., farm, appeared before newsmen with his arm still in a sling and his shirt collar open.

Hasn't Seen Briggs, He Says

He said he hadn't seen Briggs for a week, that he had sent the suspension notice to his aide by registered mail, and that Briggs' office has been temporarily closed.

"I am my own grammarian now," Ickes said.

Ickes maintained that he had "not a darn thing to conceal" and said the letter mystery was "bizarre" and "fantastic" to him.

"I haven't been able to determine what's back of it," he declared.

Phillips, Oklahoma oil executive, has denied having any connection with the letter episode.

Briggs' whereabouts, meanwhile, remained undisclosed, except that he is known by officials to be in Washington and is understood to have been in contact with them by telephone.

His typewriters have been removed from his office, it was said, presumably to check the typing.

Small Plants in 3 Areas to Make Civilian Goods

The War Production Board is planning to authorize small manufacturers in at least three regions of the United States to resume the production of civilian goods, making use of surplus materials, it was learned yesterday.

The program—"stopgap" in nature—is not expected to result in the production of large quantities of goods, but will accomplish the dual purpose of (1) disposing of materials now designated as surplus or excess and of little value to the war effort, and (2) helping small businesses over the current preinvasion period.

Policy Not Changed

An already announced policy of deferring broad-scale resumption of civilian production until after the invasion of Europe has occurred will not be changed, officials emphasized.

As outlined, the plan is expected to permit the renewed production of aluminum pots and pans, stainless steel knives and forks, kitchen utensils and other gadgets.

Complicated items requiring parts and components regarded as critical will not be produced under the plan.

At the start, operation of the program will be restricted to the three WPB regions with headquarters in Philadelphia, Cleveland, and Kansas City. The Philadelphia office has jurisdiction over this area.

Objections Raised

Objections to the plan have been raised by the armed services who are opposed to any preinvasion activity on the reconversion front. Because of their objections, the program probably will be carefully hedged with restrictions.

Authorized to participate in the plan are manufacturers in Group I critical labor shortage areas with less than 10 employes, firms in Group II tight labor shortage areas with less than 25 employes, and firms in Group III easy labor market areas with less than 50 workers. Washington is a Group I labor market area.

These manufacturers will be authorized to scour the country for material which has been designated as surplus. Before going ahead, however, they will be required to submit a bill of particulars to the appropriate WLB regional office, asking for approval.

Must Not Interfere

If it is found that the proposed activity will not interfere with war production, or deprive the war effort of needed manpower or materials, the WLB regional office will waive existing restrictions forbidding the manufacture of the items concerned.

However, manufacture of items calling for parts placed on a special critical list will not be permitted under this plan. Manufacturers with unfinished war contracts will be blocked from participating.

More regions and plants employing more workers may be included if the plan proves successful.

Original Claim 95% Correct, Butler Asserts

By the Associated Press

A second accounting of U. S. spending in Latin America was laid before the Senate yesterday by Senator Butler (Republican) of Nebraska, with the declaration that his original charge of wasteful outlay of more than six billion dollars in three years had turned out to be "95.5 per cent right."

Butler and Senator McKellar (Democrat) of Tennessee, immediately squared off in disagreement as they did last November when the Nebraskan first charged the Administration with "boondoggling" in South America and with trying to spread the New Deal hemisphere-wide with cash.

McKellar said Butler's fresh blast, "in the kindest way I can express it," tended to damage the good neighbor policy especially in wartime. Butler shot back that he thought he was "making a genuine contribution to the good neighbor policy."

Engaged Accountants

Butler offered figures compiled by a personally-engaged accounting firm to show that United States expenditures, commitments and extensions of credit to South American republics amounted to $5,733,953,543 in 1942, 1943 and 1944. Another $662,806,970 was distributed to United States possessions in the hemisphere, he said.

After his return from a tour of the Latin countries, Butler had contended that the total was above six billion dollars. Nelson Rockefeller, inter-American affairs coordinator, had put the figure at less than six billion dollars and Senator McKellar fixed it at $2,207,000,000.

"The world was supposed to believe they both were absolutely correct while they said my figures were 95 per cent wrong and 5 per cent right," Butler declared yesterday.

Sees New Deal Plot

He stated these conclusions:

1. That the Administration through expenditures in some of our possessions (Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands) is setting a pattern for a way of life not only in Latin America but throughout the world. He called the Puerto Rican administration of Governor Rex Tugwell "state socialism."

2. That it is impossible to distinguish between "boondoggle funds and those labeled as being for the war, because war funds are being drawn upon to further the New Deal's private plans."

3. There are other moneys which cannot be accurately traced except

Green and Lewis Confer Secretly on UMW's Return to AFL

Miami, Fla., Jan. 20 (AP).—The AFL Executive Council today set next Monday to consider the proposed reinstatement of the United Mine Workers as news was disclosed of a secret meeting on the issue between the estranged presidents of the two organizations, William Green and John L. Lewis.

The council chose the same day to discuss an invitation to a world labor conference in London next June. AFL participation would mean, contrary to its policy, sitting down with Soviet trade-union representatives and sharing American representation with the CIO and some independent unions.

Another council action today was a declaration calling upon Congress to enact a "simplified and uniform soldier vote law."

The Lewis-Green meeting took place in Washington recently and is believed to have been arranged by a third person interested in expediting the IMW's return to the federation. They talked about the problems relating to such reaffiliation: The Progresive Mine Workers of America, which holds the exclusive AFL charter rights in the coal industry, and the disposition to be made of coke and chemical workers, some of whom belong to Lewis' District 50.

It is believed to have been their first meeting by mutual consent in about eight years. They had been thrown together by force of circumstances once or twice before in that period. Their conference, however, does not necessarily mean a reconciliation or that commitments were made.

An Executive Council statement on soldier voting said: "The fact that these citizens are members of the Nation's armed forces, serving overseas and risking their lives against the enemy, makes it doubly incumbent upon Congress to remove any artificial restrictions upon them in the exercise of the right to vote.

"The Executive Council is opposed to the soldier vote measure passed by the Senate because it is indefinitely restrictive and limited in the application. This measure will not give every soldier overseas the chance to vote which is his right.

Senate Confirms Hill For Brigadier General

Overriding a protest from Senator Bushfield (Republican) of South Dakota the Senate confirmed yesterday the nomination of Col. William P. T. Hill of Oklahoma to be quartermaster of the Marine Corps with the rank of brigadier general.

Bushfield complained that six senior officers were passed over in the selection of Hill to take over as quartermaster general on February 1.

How to Keep Warm in Cold Weather

And timely advice it is, too, for the coldest part of our Washington winter is just ahead. You have to go to work no matter what the temperature. And there is no need to cut out outdoor sports activity below freezing. So be prepared to brave it in comfort with the aid of the Men's Store's suggestions:

A. For Bus Waiting: The British Ulster, tailored in London by famed W. O. Peake of fine quality Irish wool fleece. Unusual warmth and well-tailored appearance combined. Gray and brown with faint overplaid..... $100

B. For Ice Skating: Albert Richard Capeskin Jacket . . . the "Rocket" . . . fully-cut and tailored for maximum freedom in action and warmth in repose. Note the double chest protection, the sealed pocket treatment..... $20

C. For Spectator or Active Sports: The Yukon Parka, a fingertip-length cotton poplin coat lined with alpaca and wool. Rain, snow and sleet resistant. Parka hood lined with alpaca and wool..... $25

Not Shown:

The "Warmer," an all-wool extra-warm interlining that can be buttoned into any weight outer coat. Blue and tan; small, medium, large..... $12.50

McGregor All-Wool Plaid Shirts in colorful plaids..... $7.50 to $10

Westminster Warm Ribbed Hose, 50% sturdy cotton and 50% warm wool, $1

Globe Heavy Cotton One-Piece Unionsuit, long sleeve, ankle length..... $2

Wounded Veteran Drafted in Congress Race

Denver, Jan. 20 (AP).—Maj. Carl E. (Kayo) Wuertele, 30-year-old veteran World War II airman, was drafted today as Democratic candidate for the special congressional election March 7 to select a successor to the late Representative Lawrence Lewis, Democrat. Republicans last night nominated Dean Gillespie, Denver businessman.

Democratic leaders were advised that the War Department would permit Wuertele to accept a nomination, but stipulated that he must not campaign for office unless he is retired.

War Housing

A notable victory for war housing was won this week when the Zoning Commission refused to rezone a large site on Savannah Street on which apartments for Negro war-workers are to be built. No convincing reason for the proposed rezoning had been offered. And very strong arguments in favor of permitting this essential wartime project to go ahead had been made. We believe the Zoning Commission judiciously weighed the evidence and made the only decision consistent with the public interest.

The commission has yet to decide, however, whether war housing will be permitted to go forward in the Bradbury Heights area. In this case a somewhat different issue is presented. The vacant area in question can scarcely be said to have any pronounced characteristics which put it down as an apartment district or a neighborhood of private homes. Nor can it be said to be a Negro or a white area; although it is adjacent to two colored cemeteries. What the commission must decide is whether it will change the zoning of this area in wartime to compel a different type of construction than has been planned by its owners.

Testimony at the hearing indicated that some residents of adjacent areas wish to see this site rezoned to prevent its use for Negro housing. But it would be utterly unreasonable, if not illegal, to use zoning restrictions as a means of confining racial groups to any particular area or of preventing them settling on land now vacant. Zoning is not a question of drawing color lines and we do not believe the commission will decide the issue on this basis. If that assumption is correct, the only issue left will be whether the tract shall be reserved for future development of a more restricted type when it is now urgently needed for war housing. That should scarcely be a difficult problem for the commission to resolve in the public interest.

Distorting History

The latest Soviet organ to take up the increasingly vehement campaign which the Kremlin is waging against the Polish government in London is that new enfant terrible of Russian journalism, War and the Working Class. In its latest issue it makes the charge, already voiced officially by the Soviet government through Tass, that the Polish government does not really want to establish good neighborly relations with the Soviet Union. It then goes on to argue that before the war the Polish government was favorable to Hitler even to the point of preparing "to go to war on the side of Hitlerite Germany." That this did not happen, explains the writer in the Soviet magazine, is because "Hitler decided to make a victim of Poland instead of an ally."

Now it happens, of course, that the present Polish government is a very different government from that which held office in Warsaw in 1939. In fact, in both its personnel and its ideological background it is worlds apart from the Colonel Beck-Smygly-Rydz regime of that day. That, however, is not important. What is important is the disposition on the part of a responsible Russian organ to assume that the world has forgotten the events of 1939 and is prepared to accept a thesis which Russia happens to find convenient at the moment although it is in complete contradiction of the facts.

It is in no unfriendly spirit and with no desire to rake up old ashes that we should like to remind the writer in War and the Working Class that it was not Poland which allied itself to Germany against Russia but Russia which through its deal with Hitler made what was tantamount to an alliance against Poland. But that did not happen until after the Smygly-Rydz government, anti-Soviet though it was, had refused to participate in a German-Polish war on Russia.

Less than a month after the Munich pact Ribbentrop proposed to Poland a "general solution" of all disputed Polish-German questions and a "united German-Polish policy regarding Russia formulated within the framework of an anti-Comintern pact." Indeed, three and a half years earlier Goering, as the Polish White Book reports, urged a joint German-Polish assault on Russia, and suggested that "the Ukraine would become the sphere of influence." This plan Goering repeated in an interview with Marshal Pilsudski. There are many crimes that can be pinned at the door of the prewar Polish government. But the one crime that it must be absolved from, War and the Working Class to the contrary notwithstanding, is any readiness to join Germany in making war on Russia. No good purpose can be served by such distortion of history.

Union Funds

By refusing to eliminate from the tax bill a provision inserted by the House requiring informational returns from various tax-exempt organizations, the Senate has made sure (barring a veto of the tax bill) that labor unions will be compelled for the first time to submit to official inspection of their financial affairs. The provision making informational returns mandatory applies not only to labor organizations but also to farm cooperatives, chambers of commerce, and a long list of organizations that are exempted from payment of income taxes on the theory that they are not operated for profit. Complaints had been made that many of these tax-exempt organizations are engaged in profitable businesses that offer unfair competition to taxable concerns. In these circumstances, Congress is amply justified in asking for financial statements in order to determine whether the present system of tax exemptions requires revision.

However, it was quite obvious from the Senate debate that the ostensible purpose of the demand for a financial accounting was not the argument that carried most weight. The matter of chief interest was the effect of the proposal on labor unions. The demand for informational accounting from the unions was evidently regarded by many Senators as a move in the direction of subjecting the financial affairs and the spending activities of unions to legal regulation. To be sure, it was pointed out that returns made to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue would not be open to public inspection, though available for use by congressional committees. Nor does a financial accounting of this sort impose any new restrictions on the political uses of union funds, though the existing restrictions require clarification. Nevertheless, even the limited inspection of union financial activities called for under the tax bill affords a measure of protection against misappropriation or irresponsible spending of union funds.

What is needed, of course, is a full accounting to the public and the members of labor unions of the amount of dues collected and the disposition made of them. Senator Bailey made a powerful appeal in favor of regulation of union financial affairs in a speech that is reported to have turned the tide in favor of retention of the accounting clause. The labor unions, he said, "can tax the workers and indirectly tax the American people. They not only fix the dues of their organizations but we have put the workers in their hands. We collect their dues, in a great many instances, by what is called the check-off. We do not limit the dues; we do not know what the dues are; we just give them ad lib opportunity to charge the workers all that the traffic will bear, and we raise no question. Yet when we do undertake to get a little information, we are resisted in the name of all the cemeteries on earth, in the name of the co-ops, mutual societies, and burial organizations, and in the name of the difficulty of compiling returns here in a country where practically every man is required to file a return." This is a powerful summing up of the arguments in favor of a regulatory measure that would recognize the fact that labor unions are "affected with a public interest" and should, therefore, be subjected to a measure of public control.

While the provision for informational accounting will not accomplish these ends, it can be regarded as an entering wedge opening the way for stronger and more comprehensive public supervision of unions. The cause of organized labor would be helped, not hindered, by requiring union officials to give a public accounting of their financial stewardship. In that case there would be fewer opportunities for gangsters and confidence men to loot union treasuries and public prejudice against unions would not be needlessly aroused because of such depredations.

American Prudence

The picture of profligacy in spending that one gets in looking over wartime America is tempered in the light of some recent statistics. The Cleveland Trust Co. Business Bulletin for January 15 contains a chart plotting the course of retail sales in relation to national income from 1929 to the present time. The fact that stands out impressively is that for most of this 15-year period retail sales and national income rose and fell together. The close correspondence of the two lines showing sales and income respectively was briefly interrupted by the sharp income upturn caused by payment of soldier bonuses in 1936.

It was not until 1940 and 1941 that the rise in national income caused by defense spending brought about a disproportionately rapid advance in retail sales. During those two years retail sales averaged about 61 per cent of national income, compared with an average of about 56 per cent for the preceding 11 years. Since our entry into the war, however, advances in retail sales have lagged far behind the increases in national income. Instead of 56 per cent of the national income being devoted to purchases of goods at retail, retail sales amounted to only 50 per cent of national income in 1942 and 42 per cent in the first 10 months of 1943.

In short, although sales are at high level and prices of many goods have increased, spending has been on a greatly restrained basis, judged by past experience in periods of rising income. Much of that restraint has, of course, been involuntary. It has been forced on individuals by scarcity of goods and rationing. But the statistical evidence also emphasizes the fact that instead of buying things people have bought bonds, paid off debt, and in some cases just added to their cash holdings. If the 56 per cent sales ratio had held during the war years, the public would not be getting any more goods, but it would certainly be paying a lot more for the goods it did get, and would have a lot less money in reserve. The over-all picture is one of prudence rather than of profligacy.

Aid For Veterans

All veterans' benefits should be directed to a simple, specific purpose: to help servicemen in the transition from military to civilian life. The knowledge that we, at home, are preparing to help them make this adjustment would be perhaps the strongest boost to their morale that we could offer. Men in uniform will construe what we do now as an earnest of our intention to reinstate them in the society which they have defended. Their interest is not in gratuities or rewards for their service—which is, in any case, beyond monetary compensation—but in opportunities to lead full and useful lives when the war is over. We need to assure them that they will have such opportunities when they come home.

On Wednesday the House, without a dissenting vote, passed a bill providing mustering-out pay of $300 for men and women discharged from the armed forces after 60 days or more of honorable service. This is decidedly preferable to the Senate measure which calls for discharge bonuses ranging from $200 to $500 depending on the length and location of service. Under the Selective Service system, men have little voice in determining the length of their service. They have no voice at all in deciding where they are assigned. But wherever they served, and for however long, they have equal need of financial help to tide them over the period between demobilization and civilian employment. The sum given them should be predicated on this need and on no other consideration.

Three hundred dollars is no fortune. Neither is it negligible. It will give men a chance to look around for a job. In the aggregate it will cost American taxpayers—among whom the veterans themselves will be numbered—something more than 3½ billion dollars. Veterans will have the same interest as all other Americans in keeping public expenditures at a reasonable level and in preserving the stability of the national economy. It would be a poor kindness to give them extravagant mustering-out payments in inflated dollars.

But cash benefits at best can solve only a part of the servicemen's problem. Many of them will want a chance to secure education of which they were deprived by reason of their service. They should be afforded this chance not only for the sake of justice to them but for the sake of the general welfare. The Nation will have urgent need of trained minds in the years ahead. Better than any sort of money handout, the proposal for veterans' schooling drafted by Senator Thomas of Utah will afford these men the means of helping themselves—and at the same time of enhancing their value to their country.

We call attention to a letter from an American infantryman printed elsewhere on this page. His ideas, if not representative of all his fellow soldiers, are certainly shared by a great many of them. Some men will come out of the armed forces with trades or skills acquired in the course of their service. Others will need training to develop their latent abilities. In either case, the function of the aid given to them when they are discharged should be to reorient them—that is, to enable them to find themselves.

Northern Offensive

A year has passed since the siege of Leningrad was lifted, but during those 12 months the battle lines remained so close to the former Russian capital as to enable the Germans to shell it repeatedly with long-range artillery. Now, however, the Red army has begun a drive which should forever end that threat to Leningrad. To the west and south of that city two great offensives have been launched, with the Red army reported as having made gains in the direction of Oranienbaum and north of Novgorod.

How far this Russian drive in the north will take the Red army is not at all clear at this stage. If it makes the progress that was made in the central and southern sectors since last July—and the recapture of Novgorod shows real progress is being made—the consequences will be far-reaching. For then Germany will be forced to evacuate from the Baltic states and from Finland and will be driven back on East Prussia. But even if the net results of Russian pressure below Leningrad are not as great as that, it does pose a real problem for the Wehrmacht. For if it would be a serious blow to them to have to give way in the north, the consequences of a further retreat in the center and the south of the Eastern Front would be at least as serious.

Yet the Germans cannot bolster up one end of their far-flung line in Russia without weakening the other sectors. Moreover, the cutting of the last remaining north-south route east of Brest-Litovsk has made it extremely difficult for them to move men and supplies quickly from one threatened sector to another. That may be precisely why the long-inactive northern sector around Leningrad has suddenly flared into life. Having divided the Wehrmacht into more or less isolated armies, the Russians are now putting pressure on the segments.

ENCHANTER

Firelight enchants the room; the oaken beams
Are red with fireshine, close above the dreams
Of two who watch the briskly-burning embers
Turn to a glow all that the heart remembers.
Besieging darkness cannot enter here,
The winds, loud volleys, nor the frost's sharp spear;
While near the hearth, these two, remembering,
Keep firelit fingers on the pulse of Spring!

National Service

Mark Sullivan

Mobilizing Manpower

PERSONS WHO assay the sentiment of Congress still think a National Service bill will not be passed. But there is evidence counter to that judgment.

Chief in this evidence is the urgency and force which Secretary of the War Henry L. Stimson put into his plea for the act, in hearings before the Senate Military Affairs Committee. True, members of the committee showed a questioning spirit. This spirit does exist—in this committee, in the Senate as a whole, in Congress as a whole. But those who show this spirit have a special manner. It is the manner of men who feel exasperation toward the Administration, because of its past record on the strikes which National Service is supposed to remedy—but who in the end will support the measure if it is a proved necessity for effective conduct of the war, as Mr. Stimson said it is.

Congress respects Mr. Stimson, and respects the Army. Since the beginning of the war, Congress has not failed to pass a measure asked for by the Army or Navy with as much earnestness as Mr. Stimson put into his plea for National Service.

MR. STIMSON, in his formal statement urging the measure, dwelt upon the better use of the Nation's manpower in productions of war materials which would result from National Service. But he put primary emphasis on the presumed effect of National Service in ending strikes. And he did this for a special reason—the effect that strikes are having on the spirits of men on the fighting fronts. Mr. Stimson said: "I can tell you that . . . the industrial unrest and lack of sense of patriotic responsibility which it seems to evidence in large numbers of our population, has aroused a strong feeling of resentment and injustice among the men of the armed forces."

Mr. Stimson put the need for ending industrial unrest on yet another ground—the fact that it prolongs the war, by giving the enemy hope that our war effort may break down. After reciting the devotion and success of our fighting men on the fronts, Mr. Stimson said: "Suddenly what happened? To our troops looking over their shoulders from the battlefield . . . the American front at home suddenly seemed to be on the point of going sour. A host of what seemed to our soldiers petty controversies in industry and labor . . . arose throughout our land. The three vital industries of the home front, upon which basically all our production of weapons and transportation depend, were threatened with, or actually experienced, Nation-wide strikes—coal, steel and the railroads.

THEN MR. STIMSON made, directly and plainly, the same point which, when Gen. George C. Marshall made it three weeks ago, caused a sensation—the effect of American strikes in stiffening enemy morale: "If such a situation had arisen in Germany, you know that we should all have thought we were on the point of winning the war hands down."

If Congress saw National Service as a measure restricted to ending strikes, Congress would not hesitate—Congress would gallop to it. If President Roosevelt, instead of proposing National Service, had proposed a measure directly for ending strikes, the measure would have passed by this time. More than once the House has passed measures to regulate wartime labor relations, by votes of more than 2 to 1. One such measure, the Smith-Connally Act, was passed by both branches of Congress—with such overwhelming support that when the President vetoed it Congress supplied the two-thirds vote necessary to overcome the veto. But to Congress the National Service Act, as a means of preventing strikes, seems awkward, indirect and unjust to persons who do not strike. In order to prevent striking by a few, National Service would put onerous compulsion upon all—upon every male between the ages of 18 and 65, every woman between 18 and 50.

For Congress to reconcile itself to National Service it will need to realize the act has purposes other than ending strikes. It has the purpose of mobilizing the country's manpower for the best production of war materials. And it has the purpose of assuring the soldier on the battlefield that civilians at home are subjected to somewhat the same discipline and sacrifice as himself.

Move To The Rear

Why doesn't someone do something about the local bus situation? I ride the bus during rush hour every morning and it makes me furious to see people left standing at the stops to wait for the next bus just because people won't move back and make room for others. Often there would be room for as many as 13 or 15 more passengers if the bottleneck between the front and rear doors would just get out of the way and let others pass. I would suggest a law with teeth in it. Why not make it punishable by a $5 fine to refuse to move as far back as possible when the bus is crowded? Or give the driver the right to put the offending passenger off the bus and revoke his pass if he has one.

Infantry's Role

By Paul Schubert

Coming Ground Campaigns

IS INVASION necessary? A good many people, looking on at the furious aerial blows being dealt to Germany, persist in doubts as to the need for active ground warfare in the west. How long will the Reich be able to stand up under the terrible battering assault from the skies? As to the invasion, we are told again and again how costly it will be. We know the relative slowness of movement on the ground, even when aided by modern mobility.

The answer to the question is a very simple one, when we reverse our viewpoint and put ourselves into German strategic shoes.

Germany's present predicament is not the result of our bombing attack, but is due to Germany's manpower commitments on the ground.

IF GERMANY had no more to do, during 1944, than to hold off our bombers, our Nazi enemy might come through the year quite gracefully. If the Reich could be relieved of the need to supply the millions of ground troops on the Russian front with hundreds of thousands of tons of factory-made equipment, it would probably be possible to divert enough energy to anti-aircraft defenses, to alter the aerial equation. And if the Germans knew positively that there would be no ground invasion in western Europe this year, they could divert other hundreds of thousands of men, many aircraft, vast stores of munitions to the task of making our bombing job more difficult.

There is great appeal in the idea of cheap victory through strategic bombing. The airman, conscious of the damage he can do, is convinced that his is the modern war-winning blow. The citizen, eager for a short war at little cost in lives lost, feels that air power is the answer to all military problems.

AT THE PRESENT state of mechanized warfare, however, air warfare between industrial powers is a production race in which the time needed to build up offensive strength automatically gives the enemy time to build up defensive strength. Defensive aircraft can still be built more quickly than offensive aircraft. Had the British and ourselves been able to send, 12 months ago, our present bombing strength over Germany, we should have had a tremendous, one-sided advantage—but this is 1944 and the Germans, like ourselves, have been busy these 12 months.

The real test of the power equation between Germany and the Allies lies on the ground. That is where Germany's strength is going. Russian infantry, fighting offensive warfare at temperatures of 35 to 50 below zero, are sucking German power down the lines of supply—above all, are engaging German manpower.

American and British infantrymen, poising for invasion in the west, present the German enemy with an unsolvable manpower problem—a problem in combat manpower plus a problem in productive manpower.

Our airmen can thank the infantry of the United Nations for diverting German strength from the air warfare. Without the ground campaigns the present brilliant achievements of our strategic bombers would probably have been impossible.

Retread Soldier

The soldiers of today have dubbed as "retreads" the soldiers of 1918 who are in uniform again for this new war, or this second chapter of the first one. It is a good name for us.

Back in 1918 and 1919 when we joyously came home thinking in our innocence that that was that and that the Bosche had been put in his place forever, we realized that the experience had taught us at least several really big lessons. One was the need for basic legislation placing the Army on a firmer basis in peace so that it would be readier for war than it was before World War I. To accomplish this the National Defense Act was written.

Another lesson was that we cannot depend on volunteers to fill the ranks. Mr. Bryan was far from right in saying, "A million men would spring to arms overnight." They won't. They have to be drafted; and the Selective Service law was the answer to that. It came late, very late (September 16, 1940); but in time. Without such a law neither Eisenhower nor MacArthur would have any men today.

Another lesson was that it is not just that one young man shall stay on in the comfort and security of his own home and work in a plant or factory at higher and higher wages while his brother is sent far away to endure extreme hardships and perhaps to suffer agonizing wounds or maybe death itself. That lesson was the very clearest and plainest of all; yet it was never learned, or at least was never applied. This blindness on the part of our leaders, sad to relate, has already cost us much.

To a soldier, even a retread soldier, the attitude of his civilian brother and his brother's leaders causes a shock as great as the shells of the Germans. It more than disgusts him, it shatters his morale and all his concepts. He wonders whether he has been double-crossed and betrayed. And as I see it, he has been double-crossed and betrayed not, however, by the American people—but by some of their leaders. I refer particularly to some, and not all, of the leaders of labor; and to some, and not all, the leaders of the Government who have had such regard for their own political skins as to permit labor to go to such lengths.

Let our political leaders who constitute government realize that they must at once regain the control they have lost. Let them raise their voices now to condemn all who hinder the war effort, and let them pass immediately whatever legislation will stop strikes and will draft all men—yes, and women, too—whether for the Army, the Navy, or the factory.

A RETREAD.

Blood Plasma

I have been very much interested to read of your successful campaign to secure enough blood plasma to prolong the life of 4-year-old Billy Meers in Texas.

I was shocked, however, to learn that so many potential blood donors were available on almost a moment's notice. With so many of our soldiers wounded on foreign battle fields and desperately in need of this plasma, it seems tragic that we at home still need some special incentive to drive us to the blood bank.

If, as I understand, the supplies of plasma available for the wounded of the armed forces are far below the requirements, is it fair to jeopardize the lives of many of our heroic men in order to prolong the life of one young boy stricken with an incurable disease? Two pints of blood a day for a lifetime might save a great many lives.

Veteran's Education

On this subject of the Government giving financial aid to veterans for educational purposes after being discharged, I feel strongly about that, especially for infantrymen, since they do most of the fighting and get least of the credit. The mud slogger does not have a chance to improve his mind or learn special skills; instead, he is taught to revert to the primitive state, to kill, and that won't do much good after the war. After the war, I don't want bonuses. I only hope for help in letting me go to college and an equal chance to earn a living. How I wish the people back home realized that we don't expect money grants each month merely because we were in uniform. I expect, and will demand, that veterans be given a chance to learn. After all, by educating us we will be a stimulant to the country, not parasites.

Single Standard

It seems to me a shame that you should have wasted so much good paper and so much space in your editorial attempt to make over the inconstant women. It is not a result of war and has nothing to do with war. It is related to worthier things and on the side of both is directly relative to their bringing-up.

If instead of marrying a woman, a person of caliber, integrity and personal dignity, a boy discovers he has married a cigarette-smoking, cocktail-lounging snit, I guess he will just have to learn to "take it," and instead of blaming it on the war or crying "see what you have done to me, who is dying on the beaches while you are playing around," let him ask himself honestly what sort of a bringing up did he have and just what value was he himself when he married, and particularly let him look into himself and answer whether he is living on a double or single standard. I will lay a bet that the man who is living on a single standard will have no cause to worry about his wife's constancy, or, if unhappiness should come to him, he will be big enough to understand his own contribution and have enough within himself to overcome it.

National Service Law

Antistrike legislation and a national service law are now being contemplated. We have been told by official and unofficial commentators that labor strikes should be outlawed for the duration as they give aid and comfort to the enemy.

On the other hand, as pointed out by a well-known newspaper columnist the other day, Hitler in his recent speech very carefully made no mention of American labor difficulties. Under the Nazi and Fascist dictatorships, the common man has long forgotten what it means to be able to raise his voice in protest against unfair working and living conditions. Even in the land of our ally, Soviet Russia, the traditional right of the working class to strike or to threaten to strike, went out of existence when the dictatorship came in.

Yes, it would be an aid and a comfort—and a hope—to many millions of silenced people to know that there is still a corner of the globe where men and women are not working in involuntary servitude, to know that there is still left a portion of the earth where people are free enough to express their grievances—organized or unorganized, real or imaginary.

Hungarian Irredentism

By Paul Winkler

Confused Thinking

READERS OF the Budapest Pester Lloyd must have rubbed their eyes and looked again on January 12 when that paper published a tribute to the memory of Count Ciano.

"He continues to live as a true friend of our nation, to whom Hungary must be most grateful," the Pester Lloyd said firmly. "Not even the serious events which have occurred in the last few months, of which the details are still unknown to us, can wipe out his memory. Hungary can recall only with gratitude the man who, as one of the signatories of the Vienna award, aided our fatherland to right a wrong."

If one of the opposition papers had published this passage (for there still is a semblance of opposition in the Hungarian press and Parliament), it might not have seemed so astonishing. But the Pester Lloyd, the only German language daily of Budapest, is used as a governmental mouthpiece, and governmental policy follows obediently that of Germany—who ordered the execution of Ciano.

The explanation is to be found in the mention of the Vienna award, which took northern Transylvania from Rumania and gave it to Hungary. For the last 25 years, the main theme of Hungarian politics has been irredentism—the desire to regain the territories lost after the last war. When Hungary's interest in this direction conflicts with her present relationships, those relationships are likely to come off second best. It was for that reason that the Pester Lloyd, whether the Germans liked it or not, could not refrain from expressing sympathy at the disappearance of a man considered in Hungary as friendly to that country's territorial claims.

Hungary in Axis Camp

The fact that Hungary is in the Axis camp at all is due partly to the use of her desire for lost territories by Axis agents and her own aristocratic class and its political allies to drive her into the arms of Germany. The Reich was represented as having the strength and the will to give Hungary the frontiers she wanted, and opportunism therefore led the Hungarians to join Germany. But although she has received some satisfaction, disappointment remains her dominant feeling, for of the three chief regions in which she was interested, two belonged to other Axis satellites, Rumania and Slovakia. Hungary did win adjustments at the expense of both Rumania and Slovakia from Germany, but the result was only to leave all three countries discontented.

If the potential opposition to the present course of Hungarian government has no visible dynamic leadership, it is probably because constructive planning for a different direction in Hungarian policy is prevented by confused thinking on the subject of territorial revision. Many leaders who do not approve of the position of Hungary as a satellite of Germany nevertheless cling to the territorial claims of the country, which are irreconcilable with a democratic victory—as the landed aristocrats who pushed Hungary toward Germany in the first place understood very well.

Motives of Land Owners

Some of the Hungarian aristocrats, like Count Istvan Bethlen, had land on the territories Hungary lost in 1919, and therefore had a direct reason for urging Hungary toward Germany when they believed that the Reich might give them back their lost properties. But even those who had no estates outside of Hungary's postwar borders realized that if democracy won in Europe, and Hungary had to adapt herself to the democratic pattern, they would be obliged to accept land reform measures which would end the existence of fantastically large estates in the hands of the few, on which great numbers of peasants toiled in misery, under conditions reminiscent of medieval feudalism. Therefore they applied all their influence to keep Hungary in the totalitarian camp, using for that means an intensive propaganda campaign which stressed the need for saving the national honor by regaining the lost lands, which only Germany could help Hungary win back.

Even if the opposition leaders are unable to free themselves from the illusion that bigness and greatness are the same things, and are prevented by their desire for a larger Hungary from achieving their simultaneous but conflicting desire for a better Hungary.

There appear to be only a few groups which seem to be free of irredentist sentiments. There is a liberal young Catholic movement, headed by Emil Deszoffy and Ferenc Katona. Also worthy of note is an active group of youthful writers and poets who have turned to politics, and, under the name of "the village investigators," are examining the miserable situation of Hungarian peasants and insisting on agrarian reform as the most important issue in Hungary. The Social Democrats have also assumed a courageous attitude in their press and through their members in Parliament against the tie-up with Berlin, and it may be that the logical development of this policy will lead them also away from the dangerous paths of irredentism.

Pravda Bolsters German Morale

LINDLEY

THE NATURAL consequence of Pravda's publication of a report that Ribbentrop had been conferring with two British representatives concerning a separate peace is the series of rumors from neutral countries that the Germans are conferring, or are preparing to confer, with Russian representatives concerning a separate peace. The Germans will seize every opportunity to revive distrust among the three great allies who, by sticking together, doom Germany to complete defeat.

Before the Moscow conference, there were persistent reports of German feelers for a separate peace either with the Russians or with the British and Americans. Britain and the United States were publicly committed to the total defeat of Germany but, except by its signature to the Declaration of United Nations, the Soviet Union was not. Russian official utterances left doubt on this point, and the propaganda of the Free Germany committee organized in Moscow was directed toward a negotiated peace. Under these circumstances, western observers had grounds for thinking that the Russians might eventually make a separate peace. Even the high officials who were confident that Russia would fight through to complete victory—because any other course would be extremely risky for Russia—had little or no authoritative information to support their analysis. The Moscow agreement relieved all anxiety on this point, and the Moscow agreement was riveted at Teheran.

ALTHOUGH MOSCOW and Teheran walled up German hopes of escaping complete defeat by a division between Russia and the western powers, the Germans, of course, will go on trying to find a crevice into which they can place a diplomatic crowbar. There will be peace feelers. Probably there have been many indirect feelers already. During the first World War, the Germans were putting out feelers almost continuously from the spring of 1917 on. Many were so indirect that they could not be traced, with confidence, to Berlin. They were an effort to contrive an escape from defeat. They bore fruit in the east only when Russia collapsed and the Germans were finally able to dictate a peace on their own terms. They produced no result in the west until the rolling back of the Western Front by the Allied armies and German reverses in the Balkans compelled the German high command to admit that the jig was up.

Peace feelers undoubtedly have been coming from certain satellite sources. A feeler may come from men who are not presently in power but might try to seize power at the appropriate moment. Obviously it may be advantageous to explore certain of these feelers, whether they come from inside the Reich or from satellite sources. The principal allies, of course, have a duty to keep each other informed of such matters.

THE DYNAMITE in the Pravda article was the insinuation that the British were responding seriously to a German feeler for a separate peace. The indignation expressed in the British press and felt widely in the west was fully justified.

Like the Russian handling of the Polish question, the Pravda article serves to revive German hopes of a separate peace and thus to bolster German morale. Any form of encouragement to the Germans may prolong the war. In this respect, several of Moscow's recent actions belong in the same category with strikes or threats of strikes in the United States.

The longer range and more serious effect of this series of Russian diplomatic errors—counting those in the official press—is to revive distrust of Russia in the west. This will not disrupt the fighting alliance. But it does not promote the favorable public opinion on which an enduring partnership between Russia and the west must rest.

Bowles Urges Cities Pass Laws To Jail Price, Ration Violators

Price Administrator Chester Bowles yesterday called upon the Nation's cities to adopt ordinances which establish the right of local courts to levy fines up to $100 and jail sentences up to 90 days for "all those who sell their products above OPA ceiling prices or who transfer rationed goods without collecting ration stamps."

Eighteen cities already have such provisions, he said in a speech delivered before the Conference of Mayors in Chicago, and citizens generally would welcome regulations against the wartime chislers and gougers."

"You will, of course, get some opposition from the local pressure groups who would prefer to see prices go higher," he declared, asserting his belief that the more enforcement of pricing and rationing rules can be kept at local levels "the better it will be."

Complaints against rationing have dropped 70 per cent in recent months, and the public is completely behind OPA efforts to keep the cost of living under control, he said.

In addition to the subsidy question, he declared, the big "if" in price control for the future is in the fact that OPA expires legally on June 30. "The debate over our renewal bill," he said, "will give the pressure groups a golden opportunity both to further weaken the law under which we now operate and perhaps to reduce further the already limited budget on which we have been operating."

Other cost-of-living news yesterday included.

1. An OPA regulation which the agency said should result in decreases of about 1½ cents a pound on whole dry peas and about 2 cents a pound on split dry peas at retail.

2. A maximum price of 30 cents a head at wholesale was set on wild rabbits sold as meat. The retail maximum is 40 cents.

OPA said wartime increases in the use of wild rabbit as meat had necessitated the wholesale provision.

Children's Clothing Increase Promised

"A particularly noticeable increase" in the amount of children's clothing available at low prices in stores during February and March was promised yesterday by OPA Chief Chester Bowles.

As low-priced clothing line are returned to the markets, Bowles said, the OPA will see that the consumer is protected. "As time goes on we are hopeful that an increasing percentage of it will carry easy-to-recognize dollar and cents prices marked on each article," he declared.

Gallup Poll Checks on Service Act

Princeton, N. J., Jan. 20.—From coast to coast the opinions of voters in all income levels and geographical sections are being sounded this week by the Institute on President Roosevelt's proposal for a national service law.

Reports from Washington indicate that congressional leaders are marking time on the proposal until they hear the views of the country. The results of the Institute survey, to be published shortly, will be of special interest to political observers for the light which may be shed on the main point of contention, namely:

Does the country consider a national service law necessary at this time?

Previous surveys of opinion have shown that the principle of such a law, which would give the Government the right to tell every civilian what sort of work to do for the war, was approved by the majority of Americans as far back as March, 1942, or 21 months ago. Last summer no less than 79 per cent of all persons polled by the Institute favored the idea of compulsory labor service in the event of a manpower shortage.

But the current discussion over national service hinges not so much on the principle of such a law as on the question whether the manpower shortage is sufficiently acute to call for this drastic step. Earlier studies show that the public has been fairly evenly divided in its opinion as to whether the manpower shortage is really chronic. Much will depend on whether the Government can convince the country that the end of the war will actually be delayed unless there is a national service act.

Since Pearl Harbor the Institute has interviewed 38,646 people throughout the country on the idea of a national service draft. It has found that the majority do not think of the program in terms of "forced labor" or slavery. Their general attitude is that a national service law would put the civilian home front on the same all-out basis for war as the fighting front.

Would a national service law stop strikes? That is a matter of dispute in Washington. If the American public becomes convinced that it would deter strikes, then support for the measure is almost certain to increase.

A public statement of the pertinent facts in the case of

ESQUIRE v. POSTMASTER GENERAL

On December 30, 1943, an order revoking Esquire's second-class mailing privileges was issued by the Postmaster General of the United States, posing for the courts the final interpretation of the intent of Congress in the second-class mailing statute of 1879; the order says in part:

"I do not believe that a statute which so vitally, directly, and continually affects so many should remain longer in the realm of doubt or be subject to the vagaries of whatever Postmaster General may then be administering them.

"Nor should (the Postmaster General) be reluctant to determine the matter in such a way that all phases of it may be fully considered and decided by a court of competent jurisdiction where every right and interest of the publication, the government, and the public may be fully protected."

The original charge against Esquire was on the ground of obscenity. That charge the Postmaster General failed to sustain. In order to find against the magazine, the only way of throwing the matter into the courts, the Postmaster General made a wholly different charge, introduced during the course of the hearing, and a finding that was directly contrary to the findings, report and recommendations of the Hearing Board:

"Whatever the featured and dominant pictures, prose, verse and systematic innuendos of this publication may be, they surely are not 'information of a public character' or 'literature, the sciences, arts or some special industry.'

"Accordingly, the second-class mailing privileges of the publication 'Esquire' are hereby revoked, effective February 28, 1944.

(Signed) FRANK C. WALKER
Postmaster General"

The significance of this decision is only understandable after reviewing the essential facts of the entire case to date. They are as follows:

On September 11, 1943, the Postmaster General caused a citation to be issued, requiring the magazine Esquire to show cause why its second-class mailing privileges should not be revoked.

This action was based on the ground that in each of its issues for 1943 to date, it contained matter of an obscene character. For this reason only, it was asserted that Esquire had not fulfilled the qualifications for second-class mailing privileges.

The magazine thereupon filed an answer denying the charge.

The Postmaster General then appointed a hearing board consisting of three officials of the Post Office Department, Walter Myers (Chairman), Frank Ellis and Tom Cargill. This Hearing Board held a trial beginning October 19 and lasting through November 6, 1943. The Post Office Department produced nine witnesses, of whom six were churchmen, one a psychiatrist, one a suffragette, and one a municipal public school administrator. Esquire produced thirty-eight witnesses of whom two were churchmen and the rest ranged from famous educators, authors, youth and sports authorities and social workers to advertisers, publicists, psychiatrists and other experts.

Suddenly, without warning on October 25, when the hearing had been going on a week and the obscenity charges had backfired, the Post Office Department shifted its ground to add the contention that Esquire is not devoted to "information of a public character, or to literature, etc." On October 8 our counsel had been advised in writing that the only attack was obscenity and on October 19, in opening the trial, Government counsel had expressly limited the case to this ground and sought to exclude any other evidence.

The Hearing Board reached its decision promptly and by a vote of two-to-one, found that the material attacked in Esquire was not obscene and that the magazine satisfied in every respect the conditions of the second-class mailing statute and was therefore entitled to the continued enjoyment of its second-class mailing privileges.

This decision, although now officially known to have been reached on November 11, was not announced by the Postmaster General and Esquire learned of it only from Washington and New York newspaper stories which reported it. These reports, however, were never denied by the Postmaster General and Esquire was widely congratulated on winning the trial.

Finally, on December 30, 1943, Postmaster General Walker shocked not only the officials of the magazine, but the entire press and public of the country as well, by overruling and reversing his self-appointed Board and revoking Esquire's second-class privileges as of February 28, 1944. He took this action not on the ground that Esquire is obscene but on the ground that the magazine makes no "special contribution to the public welfare."

This action, in turn, represented only his own opinion of the magazine's contents, in the light of his own interpretation of the meaning of the statute of 1879 establishing the conditions for second-class mail. The statute merely requires, as a fourth condition, that a publication, to qualify as second-class mail matter, must be devoted to the "dissemination of information of a public character, or to literature, the sciences, arts or some special industry" nor does the statute require that such periodicals shall be "solely" or "entirely" so devoted. The reasonable and traditional interpretation of the statute has always been that such publications must be substantially devoted to material of that character. There is no magazine today which is entirely devoted to information of a public character, if that were to be construed to exclude everything that makes no "special contribution to the public good or the public welfare.

Because Government counsel had pursued an equivocal course, shifting to ground that had been specifically excluded by both the original and amended citations against the magazine, Esquire, during the course of the hearing, not only defended itself against the charge of obscenity, but also introduced affirmative evidence of the most comprehensive and conclusive character, showing that it satisfied fully, in every respect, the fourth statutory condition for second-class mail matter.

Thus it was established, to the satisfaction of the Postmaster General's own Hearing Board, that this magazine, like many other comparable magazines, is substantially devoted to the contents called for by the long-established interpretation of the statute's requirements.

This is a matter of public record, as revealed by the following quotation from the majority opinion of the Hearing Board, summarizing both the evidence and the findings reached by the Board on November 11, 1943:

"The Post Office Department put in proof eleven copies of Esquire, January to November 1943 inclusive, containing the matter complained of. These issues had a total of approximately 1972 pages of reading and advertising matter of which about 86 pages were cited as coming within the charges set forth in the notice to show cause. They constitute 90 separate items of complaint. Of these 90 items 60 were approved as not being obscene by someone or more of the Post Office Department's own witnesses. About 1886 pages of these exhibits were not condemned by the Department and both counsel for the Department and some of its witnesses stated that parts thereof were not objectionable, although most of the Department's witnesses had not read the matter which had not been referred to in the citation. In fact most of them had not read all of the matter objected to.

"The Post Office Department presented nine witnesses, most of whom spoke for their separate personal views and did not attempt to testify as to the mores of the present day.

"On its part the respondent presented thirty-eight witnesses to testify in person or by stipulation. These witnesses were distinguished psychiatrists, authors, educators, publicists, advertising business men, advertising agents, art specialists, samplers of public opinion and the like. It was the opinion of all these witnesses that none of the matter complained of was obscene, although in certain instances some of them frankly admitted that specific matter called to their attention was indelicate, vulgar and in bad taste. These opinions were reiterated and clinched on cross examination. A number of these witnesses testified that Esquire disseminated information of a public character and that it is devoted to literature, science, the arts and special industries. It was conceded on both sides that it had a legitimate list of subscribers.

"Polls, after the method of the Gallup poll, had been taken by the Curtis Publishing Company of Philadelphia and Crossley, Inc. of Princeton, New Jersey as to the Varga girl drawings. The manner of taking these polls and the results were put in evidence in great detail and showed that about 80%, as reported by the Curtis Publishing Company and 77% as reported by Crossley, Inc., of the people of the United States thought that the Varga girl drawings were not obscene and that approximately the same percentage were willing to have it come to their homes.

"Respondent's witnesses further testified as to the standards of the mores of our time and that the magazine did not violate these standards. In addition a large number of copies of various publications were introduced to show that publications of a similar character are publishing matter similar in content to that published by Esquire and that such publication is general and not a matter of isolated instances.

"In view of the foregoing, the following majority of the Board finds as follows:

(1) The charge of obscenity in the original and amended citations has not been supported and proved in fact or in law.

(2) The publication has not failed to comply with the 4th condition of section 226 Title 39 of the U. S. Code as to its second class mailing entry.

RECOMMENDATION

"It is, therefore, respectfully recommended that the proceeding herein be dismissed and that the second-class entry of the magazine Esquire be continued in full force and effect.

(Signed) WALTER MYERS
Chairman

(Signed) F. H. ELLIS
Members of the Board."

The final phase of this controversy is now in the making. Esquire has instituted an action in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia for an injunction to restrain the Postmaster General from carrying out his arbitrary decision and to reinstate Esquire's second-class mailing privileges.

Esquire, Inc.

Pending final adjudication by the Federal courts, Esquire will be sent to its subscribers by mail without interruption.

'Corvette K-225,' Grips With Its Fine Integrity

Randolph Scott Stars in Story Of Convoy and Its Guardians

IT IS AN INTERESTING, exciting and apparently authentic story that smashes its way across the screen in Universal's production of "Corvette K-225," the new screen attraction at Loew's Capitol Theater.

Told simply and directly, with an effective and convincing economy of dialogue, "Corvette K-225" is to the sturdy little fighting ships in the convoy service what "Action in the North Atlantic" was to the merchant vessels carrying the vital cargoes so desperately in need of protection from enemy attack by undersea wolf packs and from the air.

The action is initiated by the return to his Canadian port of a corvette commander whose ship has been lost with most of its crew. In that crew was a youthful junior officer to whose sister he returns a memento of her brother, which threads into the narrative a slender thread of romance that always is kept subordinate to the more rugged demands of a thrilling drama aimed at the hazards and heroism of the service that has brought the Nazi U-boats into subjection.

The construction, launching and commissioning of the new 200-footer Lieut. Comdr. MacClain has selected as his next command occupy the early footages of the film. Her first crossing to England on the fringes of a 40-ship convoy, manned by green crew, sparsely sprinkled with seasoned seamen, furnish the tenseness, the suspense and the high excitement of the later sequences, when the K-225 defends itself and its charges against air attack, sinks two subs and limps into port with the six hounded ships separated from the main fleet.

Insight Into Real Thing

As in "Action in the North Atlantic," a comprehensive survey of the method of assembling a convoy, and the manner in which it deports itself once on the high seas, is made an important part of the early sequences of "Corvette K-225."

The element of personalized drama is limited to the experiences on his first cruise of Joyce Cartwright's second brother and is kept at so discreet a minimum that it never interferes with or obscures the major purpose of the film—the depiction of one of the most valiant branches of service engaged in the present war.

Ace Cast Scores

The cast, by the very nature of the case, is preponderantly male. Randolph Scott, lean, drawn, hard and weather-beaten, is ideally cast as Commander MacLain—particularly so since he manages his clipped speeches and terse action with such skill as to create a complete sense of reality. Opposite him, in a manner of speaking, Ella Raines, making her screen debut, plays efficiently and with a considerable degree of Spartan charm as the only feminine figure in the play.

James Brown, whose memorable first martial assignment was in "Air Force," ably portrays the girl's younger brother, whose early bewilderment and mild rebellion at the rigors of strict discipline in due time convert themselves into a species of valorous devotion to duty never permitted to become too flamboyant for easy belief.

Barry Fitzgerald as Pincher O'Meara, Andy Devine as Chief Engineer Walsh, Murray Alper as Jones and Fuzzy Knight, "Cricket," who takes a shaggy little terrier aboard as a mascot, supply an unobtrusive vein of comedy that invariably is kept in its proper place and proportion.

Others who contribute notably to a tightly written screen play by John Rhodes Sturdy, Lieut., R. C. N. V. H., ably directed by Richard Rosson, with Howard Hawks as producer, include Noah Beery, jr., Richard Lane, David Bruce and Thomas Gomez, former member of the Lunt-Fontanne acting company.

Burnette a Hit

The new stage bill at the Capitol provides an interval of agreeable entertainment of more than usual diversity. It is opened by James Evans, upside-down juggler, whose "Foot Feats" are none the less astonishing because they have been seen in Washington before. Neil Stanley and Marti, in a duality of character impressions, score soundly, with Marti, the feminine member of the duo having a slight edge in the perfection of her impersonations. DeVal, Merle and Lee, two men and an exceedingly durable young woman, close the bill in a devastating burlesque of ballroom and adagio dancing.

But just ahead of them comes Smiley Burnette, in the headline spot, assisted by one Tod Mason, an attenuated expert with the bullwhip, a guitar or a jest. Smiley Burnette, what with his long association with Gene Autry on the screen, his songs and his bucolic humor, is by way of being a bit of an institution. He was in top form at yesterday's first performance and could have been going on yet on the basis of applause. His humor is savory and his songs sure-fire.

Sam Jack Kaufman's medley overture of excepts from favorite operettas, with Lynn Allison and orchestra specialists soloing handsomely; Art Brown's enthusiastic songfest, and the Fox Movietone News supplement a feature of conspicuous integrity.

Feminine Touch in Convoy Film

Comedians Will Hunt Wailing Wall!

Hollywood, Calif., Jan. 20.—Up to now, only producers have used a wailing wall, but that's going to be different when comedians get a squint at Danny Kaye in "Up in Arms." Boy! He's a whole blitzkrieg. So much talent it scares you. And how right he was to refuse to come to Hollywood until he was offered a whole picture to romp through. When his name flashed on the screen at a sneak preview, there wasn't a hand. Nobody knew him. But when it was over, they clapped, screamed, and yelled. It's by far the best thing Dinah Shore's ever done. Constance Dowling is clever and attractive. I'd like to see her in a dramatic picture. The Goldwyn beauties are just that. How they were going to inject glamor on a troop ship was something that worried you. But boy! They did it. Before a soldier said, "There was nothing like this in the last war," and his buddy replied, "No, and there isn't in this either," you had already said it to your neighbor. But it's Danny Kaye's romp. He's what I call sensational.

I still don't believe Tallulah will do "There Shall Be No Night."

Seems Strange, Yes?

Would you believe that Edward Arnold will play Greer Garson's son-in-law? Well, he will in "Mrs. Parkington." But that's when Greer reaches the age of 84. They haven't cast her granddaughter yet. How about Susan Peters? She's ideal for it. Tay Garnett directs . . . Did you know that was Linda Darnell as the virgin in "Song of Bernadette?" Alan Marshall and his wife are off on a bond tour. So is Errol Flynn. It starts in New Orleans and ends in Kansas City. No, he won't take his pet blue fox along . . . Leo McCarey has invited me to the trial when Myron Selznick's suit against him comes up, and promises the best comedy he's ever turned out.

They're Doing It

It was a little old lady who ordered a grand jury investigation into the Joan Berry-Charles Chaplin situation. She read about things going on and it worried her that an alien could interfere with the civil liberties of an American citizen. The more she pondered it, the more worried she became, so she took her worry to Charles Carr, United States attorney, and asked that it be looked into.

Laurette Taylor has been here visiting her son Dwight. Since Marie Dressler's passing, we've been wanting some one to take her place. Might I humbly suggest to Metro that Laurette receive that honor? She is one of the great actresses of our time. Frances Marion, who wrote most of Marie's successes, is at Metro, so it would seem to me a set-up. How about it, fellows? . . . Notes and Anecdotes of Broadway

New York, Jan. 20.—The opening of the Fourth War Loan drive this week makes this a timely and appropriate story: Recently, Mrs. Lytell Hull, the former wife of Vincent Astor and head of the New Opera Company, was discussing Max Reinhardt, who was associated with her in the production of "Rosalinda" . . . "You were at Max' funeral, weren't you?" one of her lady friends asked her . . . "Yes, and I sent flowers, of course," said Mrs. Hull . . . "You sent flowers?" her friend repeated. "In Reinhardt's will he requested that flowers be omitted—that the money, instead, should go to an anti-Hitler cause." . . . "If I had known that," replied Mrs. Hull, "I'd have bought another war bond."

WENDELL WILLKIE

The Soviet report on the British-Nazi peace feeler is expected to give Wendell Willkie his opportunity to reply to Pravda's recent attack against him . . . The University of Havana will inaugurate a department of motion pictures—the third such department in the world. The other two are at N. Y. U. and in Moscow . . . The Philip Morris Playhouse withdrew its negotiation for the radio rights to a hit movie which made one of the top grosses of 1943. The only objection was to the title, for fear that it might be associated, by the radio listeners, with a rival brand of cigarettes. The movie is "Mr. Lucky."

Martin Gabel, the theatrical producer, was the master of ceremonies in the recent four-networks broadcast marking the start of the Fourth War Loan Drive. Secretary Morgenthau, who appeared on the program, watched Gabel—one of radio's foremost actors—reading his script with deep, intense fervor . . . When the broadcast ended, Morgenthau congratulated Gabel, and then asked him: "Those lines you were reading—you really meant it, didn't you?"

The release of Lepke by the Federal authorities to N. Y. State for execution marks another triumph for Burton K. Turkus, who prosecuted the gangster. This makes seven out of seven—a 100 per cent record in Turkus' prosecution of Murder, Inc. . . . Ruth McKenney, author of "My Sister Eileen," is going to Hollywood with her husband. They wrote a story about Washington life, and sold it to Columbia Pictures for $25,000 . . . Joe Mitchell, who wrote "McSorley's Wonderful Saloon," is going to India for the New Yorker magazine.

The American fliers in the South Pacific have introduced the "Victory Roll," an aerial flip, which is a signal of glad tidings for the ground crews who wait so anxiously for the fliers' return and for news of the results of the battle . . . The "Victory Roll" is a slow, lazy somersault by an American plane—a complete circle, performed over the home landing field, as an indication that the returning flier has downed an enemy plane. Two Victory Rolls are a signal to the ground crew that the flier has downed two planes . . . One Victory Roll per downed Zero is the ritual now being performed in the South Pacific.

Contrary to expectations, there will be no minority report filed in the Truman Committee's attack against the Army for having sponsored the Canol project . . . A visitor at the War Production Board's offices in Washington received his visitor's pin, after signing the usual information slips, and paraded through the building wearing the pin with his name on it—the name he had given, Seimon Timoshenko. . . . Sir Thomas Beecham, discussing modern composers, said: "The creative cup of the world is running dry. People will look back on the twentieth-century composers with wonder, astonishment and skeptical incredulity. Nothing of any real, artistic import has been written or played frequently enough to attract an audience since the early part of the century."

Stepin Fetchit, who listed lawyers' fees of over a million dollars in his recent petition in bankruptcy, attended a luncheon given by Twentieth Century-Fox, for a large group of bankers visiting the studio. Fetchit was late in arriving. And as he walked by the long imposing line of bank presidents and treasurers, Fetchit scratched his head in awe, and sighed: "Lawd, what a place to start a crap game."

Norman Taurog, who will direct the MGM movie about the Church of the Good Thief at Dannemorra Prison, went there a few days ago, to see Father Hyland, the man responsible for building the church. There Taurog was told this story: The postmaster in a nearby village suddenly died, and nobody could find the keys to the postoffice safe. The safe was taken to Dannemorra, where one of the veteran safe-crackers was invited to open it . . . The prisoner worked at the job carefully. "Come on. Hurry up," the warden told him . . . "I can't do it any faster, Warden," the prisoner protested. "After all, I'm not working with my own tools."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

SELDOM HAS the Democratic National Committee, meeting this week in Washington, summoned its heterogeneous members under such politically gruesome circumstances.

Farm elements which once regarded F. D. R. as their savior have forgotten the past. Now, not content with merely voting Republican, they want to work actively agin him. Labor, which has received greater benefits from Roosevelt than in 150 years of American history, now is beginning to turn sour.

Meanwhile, some farm and business critics actually believe that the quarrel between Roosevelt and John L. Lewis is a front; that the two men really are in cahoots.

There is no basic criticism of the conduct of the war. In fact, general agreement is that it is going well. But there is a fervid, vitriolic undercurrent of determination to defeat Roosevelt —or any Democrat if the war, at least in Europe, is over by November.

Fully realizing that the tide is running out, the Democratic National Committee meets to elect, as successor to placid Frank Walker, a new chairman who must have the courage to start a new and perhaps hopeless battle, plus the ability to pick up all the broken pieces and weld them together.

Democratic Committee Lobbyists

BACK IN THE EARLY days of the New Deal, a terrible hue and cry was raised over the fact that certain members of the Democratic National Committee also carried on a remunerative lobbying practice on the side. The issue received so much publicity that the President denounced it publicly and called upon all committeemen engaged in lobbying to resign. As a result, Bob Jackson of New Hampshire, Arthur Mullen of Nebraska and Bruce Kremer of Montana all resigned from the committee.

Today, however, the White House and apparently the public have lost their sense of smell. For months, the same situation has existed, but the White House has said absolutely nothing. Oscar Ewing, who represents the Aluminum Corporation of America, one of the biggest companies doing business with the Government, holds no less a position than vice-chairman of the Democratic National Committee. Its secretary is George Allen, executive of the Home Insurance Co., one of the fire insurance group whose giant lobby against the Sherman Antitrust Act has been vigorously criticized on Capitol Hill.

Treasurer of the committee is Ed Pauley, who had the decency to submit his resignation when his business put him in the position of lobbying for a high-octane gasoline plant. However, unlike the days when FDR publicly demanded the resignation of Arthur Mullen of Nebraska from the committee, Pauley's resignation has not been accepted.

Taxes and Campaign Funds

RECENTLY, FRANK WALKER has made a unique move toward a similar situation. Privately, he is trying to persuade committee members to take Missouri's Robert Hannegan as the new national chairman. Hannegan happens to be commissioner of internal revenue, and Frank Walker is either very naive or very forgetful of past Republican scandals when big contributors to the party did not have to worry too much about income taxes.

Today Republicans are already licking their chops over the charges they could so easily hurl against a Democratic chairman sitting in judgment over the income taxes of Democratic angels who contribute to the campaign fund.

Note: Hannegan, an able executive, is the Missouri Democrat who led the fight to refuse Missouri's Republican Governor, Forrest C. Donnell, his seat for 40 days, until the Missouri Supreme Court ordered him seated. Hannegan was first discovered by Assistant President Jimmy Byrnes, who thought so highly of him that he sold him to Frank Walker as commissioner of internal revenue.

Casey at the Bat

OUT IN CHICAGO, a year ago this month, rebellious Democrats began to kick over the traces at the manner in which Republicans were getting all the juicy plums in Washington while Democrats were being ignored. The man who came to the President's rescue at that meeting was Eugene Casey, a man who had lifted himself by the bootstraps from a Maryland farm right into the White House.

He salved Democratic wounds last year at Chicago and he may be the one to do it this week at Washington. In fact, so many committeemen are arriving already pledged to Casey for chairman that, unless Frank Walker performs a miracle and puts over his Internal Revenue Commissioner, the Irishman-farmer from Maryland may find himself with the unwelcome job of pulling the Democratic Party up by the bootstraps at a time when it will take some Herculean pulling.

Meanwhile, revolt in the Democratic ranks is so fervid that Frank Walker himself took a trip out to the Midwest to soothe ruffled feelings—but failed. Despite his efforts, rebellious Judge Jim Quigley, Nebraska national committeeman, has called an early meeting of the committee for today, to demand the resignation of Secretary of Agriculture Wickard and Farm Credit Governor A. G. Black.

In the end, revolt will be so bad that harassed Frank Walker, much against his will, probably will have to remain as national chairman.

Creelman 7-5 Favorite Over Perry Tonight

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

The Turf and Sport Digest, in this month's issue which reaches the newsstands today, has discovered Walter Haight despite the fact the trick is to detach yourself from Haight. In four slick pages of his magazine, Editor Edgar G. Horn puts the life story of The Post Sports Staff's man about the horse track.

POVICH

Overpowering his native modesty, which is nonexistent, Haight triumphantly slapped the article on our desk and pointed to the profuse illustrations, all of which featured the Haight mug. "Waddaya think of that?" he demanded.

"Personally," we said, "we think it is a wanton display of newsprint with the paper situation what it is."

"That's right," said Haight, "I've been want'n to make the magazines for a long time. I might just as well admit it."

You don't have to sit up and take notice of Haight. Just keep your position. At the slightest kind of encouragement, or without any at all, he'll come to you to bend your ear back with Haight-isms. He's always the hero of his own stories and so ingenious that he not only makes you listen but like 'em.

We've been listening to Haight for 20 years now, and he tells the truth just often enough to baffle us.

The Turf and Sport Digest claims Haight in the name of the race-chart calling profession, probably the most exclusive fraternity in the United States. "Better make that the United Nations, they'll never know the difference," Haight says.

Of the 130 million persons in the United States, there are, indeed, fewer than 100 who can call a race chart with an acceptable degree of accuracy and Haight is one of 'em. "Better make that one of the best," he says, "that's what it says about me right here in this article."

Editor Horn tells the story of the press-box visitor who was intrigued by Haight's routine of whipping out a $5 bill and, without studying the form of the horses, sending a boy to make a bet for him on the horse's nose. "How can you do that?" he was asked. "Don't you ever study the horse's record?"

"Study the records, why, man, I don't have to study 'em. I write 'em," explained Walter.

In the past year, Haight has been suffused with a new pride, his 18-year-old son who played tackle on Coolidge High School's District championship football team, and who next month will sign up with the Marines. "His name is Raymond," he says, "and we named him after nobody. I'll tell you about that.

"When he was born they told me his mother should have the privilege of naming the boy to her liking and that I should keep out of it. That was all right with me until I overheard her discussing the subject of a name with all the relatives. When I heard names like Horace and Worthington and Elmer, I stepped in and took charge. I got tough and said 'we're going to name him Raymond for no reason at all except it's a pretty good name.'"

Young Haight is not the spittin' image of his old man. He is a nice-looking lad, in fact, and a couple of years ago when Haight introduced the boy to some of his racetrack colleagues, they were startled that he was the father of such an upstanding young man.

"You know what they told me," says Haight, "They said 'Walter, you bum, you outbred yourself.'"

Haight used to play football himself. One year at Business High School and several seasons on the sandlots and semipro teams around Washington. He was a fullback and we used to hear tales of how he would buck a line with his eyes closed. He denied that last charge until a pal of his playing days let the birds out on him.

"We were on the other team's 5-yard line when we gave Haight the ball on the next play. He bucked it over the goal line but he never knew when he crossed the goal. When he tried to get up, he couldn't figure what was keeping him down. Then he found out he had dived 15 yards over the goal line and landed head first underneath a little concrete bench beyond the field. We had to move the bench off him so we could get on with the game."

"That's a lie," said Haight. "That bench was only 8 yards back of the goal line."

Tech, Wilson Top School Court Frays

Tech and Wilson's clash, second game on the Interhigh championship series program at the Tech gym, will provide the feature of a weekend crowded with schoolboy basketball action hereabouts. These rivals start their battle at 8:45, with Eastern and Anacostia taking the floor at 7:30.

Both Tech and Wilson have lost a game in the series to date and will go down fighting before either takes its second defeat. The rivals have shown flashes of good form and Tech will enter tonight's game a slight favorite. The Trainers have won two series games while Wilson has taken one.

Although Eastern is a heavy favorite to defeat Anacostia, the boys from the other side of Eastern Branch have been improving and will be out to hang an upset on their ardent rivals.

In the other games, Gonzaga, recent winner over St. John's, will be a slight favorite over Georgetown Prep in the clash of these teams at Georgetown Prep, starting at 3:30 p. m.

The line-up for today follows:

Anacostia vs. Eastern Tech vs. Wilson (high school series), Tech gym, first game, 7:30.

Baltimore Friends at St. Albans, 3:30.

National Training School at Bethesda-Chevy Chase, 3:30.

Gonzaga at Georgetown Prep, 3:30.

St. John's at Greenbelt, 9.

Rockville at Montgomery Blair, 4.

Washington-Lee at Fairfax, 8.

George Washington at Fredericksburg.

Vines Equals Links Record, 7 Under Par

San Gabriel, Calif., Jan. 20 (AP).—Over the same picturesque country club course where he took up golf seriously after laying aside his famous tennis racquet, Ellsworth Vines today equaled the course record of 64, seven under par, to lead gross scorers in a one-day, 18-hole pro-amateur bestball tournament.

He and his local partner, Watson Hollis, who assisted him on three holes, had a best ball of 61.

Vines' 34, 30 tied the course record held by two local players, Johnny Blumenberg and Frank Hixon.

Finishing second to Vines and Hollis were Pro MacDonald Smith of Los Angeles and Fred Allen, San Gabriel, with a best-ball of 29, 34—63.

Third were Byron Nelson, Toledo, and Pete Young, San Gabriel, with 31, 33—64.

Nelson finished second to Vines in the gross scoring with a 34, 33—67.

Tied for next position among the gross scorers were Sammy Byrd, Detroit, 37, 32—69, and Lieut. J. F. Stapp, Los Angeles, 34, 35—69.

Vines who required only 26 putts for 18 holes, had birdies on the 4th, 9th, 11th, 12th, 13th, 14th and 16th.

Willie Hoppe Rallies To Turn Back Cochran

Detroit, Jan. 20 (AP).—Willie Hoppe, world's three-cushion billiards champion, came from behind tonight to defeat Welker Cochran, fromer champion, in the eighth block of their Detroit match, 50 to 48 in 48 innings. Cochran won the afternoon block—his first victory since the match came to Detroit—by a score of 52 to 50 in 51 innings. The score to date in their cross-country nontitle competition was Hoppe 1650, Cochran 1505.

4100 Boxers in Fighting Forces Share Trophy

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Air Current, Atkinson Up, Takes Purse

Hialeah Park, Fla., Jan. 20 (AP).—Running to the form that made him a shifty performer in New York the past season, Air Current got up in the last nod to nose out Mettlesome in the featured Southerner Purse here this afternoon. Flying the silks of Allen T. Simmons, Akron radio magnate, the 5-year-old son of Carlaris was whipped out by Ted Atkinson to pay his backers $5.50 fo. $2.

Alforay, in under a feathery 100 pounds, was a tired third, five lengths off the front pair. A half-dozen veterans started in the 7-furlong test over a good track, with the fancied Minee-Mo failing dismally, although highly recommended by Tropical Park form. Air Current, benefited by having a recent race under his belt, was a close second choice. He was timed in 1:26 flat.

Alforay broke very fast, stealing a length lead while Mettlesome was being hustled after the lightly weighted sprinter. Steve Brooks shot Mettlesome into a clear advantage rounding out of the backstretch, while Alforay still had five lengths showing before Air Current. Atkinson sent the latter around the leaders for the drive through the stretch.

Texas Flash Adds Height, Sees Records

San Antonio, Tex., Jan. 20 (AP).—Flyin' Charley Parker, the blond bullet of Texas schoolboy track, doesn't promise that he'll better any of his marks this year but ventures that if he does it will be because of added height.

Charley won't have to surpass his 1943 performances much to hang up world records. He already is national scholastic 220-yard king with a 20.6 seconds timing and he has raced the 100 in 9.5.

"If I better any of my 1943 records, I would say a lengthened stride caused by added height would be accountable," said the "Pony Express," now in his final season at Thomas Jefferson High School.

Parker is 17 years old, 5 feet 9½ inches tall and has gained exactly one pound over last year, weighing in at 147.

An appendicitis attack prevented him from competing in the national AAU last year after he had set dash records at the Texas Interscholastic League meet. He hopes to make the AAU, the Drake relays and other major events this season.

Charley hasn't lost a dash race in two years and has 37 straight victories to his credit.

Says Minors Need Help:

Rickey Indicates He's Ready To Fight for 'Chain Store'

New York, Jan. 20 (AP).—Branch Rickey, a man of many words, left a lot of things unsaid at a press conference today but he also said enough to convince a group of reporters that he is ready to put up a fight for "chain store" baseball if it becomes necessary.

After giving off a few preliminary sparks yesterday when he said that Baseball Commissioner K. M. Landis is not interested in the extension of baseball, Rickey kept the fireworks under cover today while he discussed the shortage of good ball players and the difficulty of getting them to sign contracts.

RICKEY

When someone finally brought up the question of whether the controversy over the farm system will be revived when the major-minor league agreement is rewritten this year, the originator of the chain idea looked out the window a moment and replied: "I suppose it will.

Would Limit Discussions

"I should like to limit the discussions of the postwar planning committee to the realignment of leagues. It's about baseball as a whole; the existence of leagues under a better setup than they have had before. I would say there is a concentration of opponents of the farm system on the committee."

Rickey said he had just two statements to make on that subject: "One, the farm system is not altogether a result of effort on the part of the higher classification clubs but resulted partly from the needs of clubs in the lower classes. Two, the rehabilitation of the minors does not rest on theories. The leagues will exist or not exist. They can exist only because they are properly financed. Judge Bramham (C. G. Bramham, president of the National Association) is as good a source as you can go to in order to find out if financing can be done by local capital in inexperienced hands."

Favors Local Ownership

Bramham recently issued a statement strongly favoring local ownership of minor league clubs.

Citing the comparatively small reserve lists of the major league clubs, Rickey indicated that he doubted whether class AA and A-1 baseball would continue in 1944. "I see no reason for doubt about the majors going ahead," he said. "I am glad the double-A's all feel confident and I wish I could feel as confident as they are."

The class C and D leagues will not face the same problems, he explained, because they are in better position to secure players who are free agents.

Wash. College Bows to Rally Of C. U., 42-31

Chestertown, Md., Jan. 20.—Catholic University's tossers came from behind here tonight to defeat Washington College, 42-31, in a spirited battle. The visitors were unable to keep up in the first half and trailed at intermission, 23-19.

In the second half, C. U. gained momentum to take command and was coasting along in front during the final 10 minutes.

The Cardinals used only five men and all dented the scoring column. Dick Scanlon led the attack with 4 field goals and a like number of fouls but Mercak and Szlarz also accounted for 4 goals. All of the 6 players used by Washington College also scored.

Maxim Booked For Turner's Fight

Joey Maxim of Cleveland, who is regarded as the "uncrowned" duration light heavyweight champion, has been signed to headline a boxing show at Turner's Arena on January 31, Matchmaker Gabe Menendez announced yesterday.

Maxim, a former Golden Gloves champion, will fight in a 10-rounder against an opponent now being lined up by Menendez exactly one week after Holman Williams of Chicago, Sergt. Joe Louis' protege, fights Gene Buffalo, transplanted Philadelphian, in a 10-rounder Monday night at the arena.

Menendez pointed out that this is the first time in the history of Turner's Arena that two such high-ranking fighters have followed one another in bouts.

Bullis Rally Wins, 30-26, Over Central

Bullis came from behind yesterday to send Central High's five down to a 30-26 defeat in a battle in the Central gym. In turning back the Vikings, Bullis used only six men, the regulars playing all but a few minutes of the torrid battle.

Central, led by Pete Panturis' eagle eye, ran up a 15-12 lead in the opening half. Bullis came back to hold Central and tied the count at 15-all in the third period. From that point to the end, Bullis was not seriously threatened.

Clyde Scott with 12 points and Jack Burke with 8 led the attack for Bullis while Panturis, as usual, was the strong man of the Central offense with 12 points.

Lujack Tames Shots, Makes Irish Quintet

South Bend, Ind., Jan. 20 (AP).—Johnny Lujack, who was something of an expert at rifling passes on the football field, toned down his basketball shots, won a first team berth on the Irish cage squad, and praise from Coach Ed Krause.

Krause said earlier in the season Lujack's shots would "bank the bankboard like a fielder hitting a line drive. But now he's developing into a swell long-shot artist, is getting more arch to his shots and is playing a nice defensive game. He helps us a lot."

Lightweights Primed for Uline Clash

The largest advance sale of the indoor season was reported at Uline Arena last night as Washingtonians awaited eagerly tonight's scheduled nine-round boxing feature involving Victor Creelman, sensational New York lightweight, and Aaron Perry, 18-year-old local colored favorite.

The 20-year-old Creelman last night ruled a 7-to-5 favorite over the local boy, but the tremendously popular Perry—with only six months of professional experience behind him—was given a great chance to smash through to an upset.

Won 31 Straight

Creelman had rolled up a string of 31 successive victories recently when he finally lost on split decision to Billy Banks. The youthful New Yorker, aroused over this decision which he felt he had earned, has been working out at Stillman's gymnasium within the past week, and is confident he will score over Perry.

Perry was boxing with Police Boys' Club No. 2 at Twelfth and U sts. as late as last March when he was spotted by Harry Garsh, his present manager who formerly directed Bruce Flowers. Garsh paced Perry slowly in gymnasium workouts, but finally turned him loose in professional competition last June.

Since turning pro Perry has lost but one fight, this a four-round decision to "Tiger" Nelson early in his career. Otherwise he has swept ten bouts, seven of these on knockout, and has established himself as a fine combination of boxer and puncher.

AARON PERRY

A knockout by either fighter would not surprise tonight, since both have thunder in their fists. Furthermore both are willing, aggressive youngsters who prefer slugging it out toe-to-toe and who force the fight whenever possible.

A potent supporting show backs up the main event.

A pair of spirited sixes offer: Lew Phillips vs. Bee Bee Washington, middleweights, and Maxie Starr vs. Charley "Dixie" Davis, welterweights.

Eddie Sparks and Jackie Smith, light heavyweights, clash in one four while another is to open the show at 8:45 o'clock.

Bethesda-C. C. Wins

The Bethesda-Chevy Chase Girls made it four basketball wins in as many tries this season when they defeated Washington-Lee High, 31-18, yesterday. Claire Ockley led the scoring for the home club with 16 points.

Conference Fines Georgia U. $500 for Using 5 Ineligibles

Lexington, Ky., Jan. 20 (AP).—The Southeastern Conference executive committee has fined the University of Georgia $500 for the alleged use of five ineligible football players last season, it was announced today by Dr. W. D. Funkhouser, secretary of the conference.

Names of the players were not disclosed, but minutes of the annual meeting, held in Nashville, Tenn., December 10, said Commissioner M. S. Conner reported Georgia "had flagrantly violated the rules" by using five ineligible players last season "in spite of definite advices to the contrary by the commissioner."

Dr. Funkhouser said the University of Georgia had appealed the decision in writing and that it would be taken up at the next meeting of the conference executive committee, sometime this spring.

The minutes said Commissioner Conner reported that "the attitude of the coach at the University of Georgia had been one of defiance of conference regulations."

The penalty for violation of conference regulations may be placed as high as a fine of $1000 for each offense, under conference rules.

Dr. Harmon W. Caldwell, president of the University of Georgia, visiting in Atlanta today, said Georgia had filed an appeal with the committee, protesting its action.

He said Georgia was forced to use the men claimed ineligible in order to carry out its football schedule. The five players referred to were transferred from other colleges and, under old rules of the conference, were ineligible to play fotball during their first year.

Dr. Caldwell said the executive committee changed eligibility rules at its December meeting and under existing rules the men would have been permitted to play during their first year.

Coach Wallace Butts was away from the university in Athens today and names of the players involved were not available.

Government Girls to Learn Right Dress

Want to know how to make the most of yourself, your clothes and your pocketbook? Want to take a short course in how to be smart-looking though a working gal? Could you use some tips from the head of a New York model agency? Some advice from a world-famous designer?

All this (and who wants heaven, too?) will be available to a 100 per cent Government girl audience January 25 and 26 at the Department of Interior auditorium in the Wartime Educational Clinic, sponsored by the Government Girls' Club and presented by The Washington Post in the interests of showing Federal workers the know how of spending less money more wisely—and having fun in the bargain.

Take It From Them

Get this line-up of talent: Elsa Schiaparelli, clothes designer for the world's best dressed woman, on this occasion personal adviser to Milady the Government Girl, with a Washington salary in mind; Harry Conover, whose eye for beauty has made his "cover girls" among the most discussed in America, now ready to talk to and about the most discussed working girl in the Nation (habitat, Social Security Building to Pentagon and way points); Representative Winifred Stanley (Republican) of New York, with first hand knowledge of careers, and David Cohn, author of "Love in America," with a bachelor's views on women.

Duration Wardrobe Plan

To these names add Craig McGeachy, First Secretary of the British Embassy, who will describe some highlights of English women in the war; Dr Naomi Kanof, dermatologist, with suggestions on keeping a healthy skin; and clothes, clothes, clothes—good buys, bad buys, office garb, date dresses and a duration wardrobe plan—all combined with imagination and ingenuity to make clothes education fun.

Government girls are eligible for tickets (seating capacity of the auditorium is limited) by applying to employe counselors or personnel officers in various agencies.

Plane Traffic Halted Here by Dense Fog

Dense fog halted plane traffic on the Washington National Airport last night after 8 and was expected to continue to interfere with air travel until the sun dispels it sometime today, probably about 10 a. m.

Cause of the London-like mist was that the ground was colder than the air, weather officials said. The temperature was expected to drop to freezing early today.

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN
Of Tired Kidneys
If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.
The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.
If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.
Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years! They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Wanted by Fleischmann!
Good Judges of Good Whiskey To Try a Great New Brand!

TASTE! BODY! AROMA! These are the three qualities of a superb whiskey—and in Fleischmann's PREFERRED you find all three! The taste is rich, delicious! The body round, and full! The aroma, delicate!

Wouldn't You Like to Serve a Whiskey that has the Full, Ripe Richness of the World's Finest, Most Limited Brands? If you would, now you can! Read why!

● This invitation is written for the few men who are really good judges of good whiskey ... who can appreciate a whiskey that is as gloriously rich, creamy and delicious as the world's finest, most limited brands—and who do not need a high price to confirm them in their judgment.

We set out several years ago to see if we could make such a whiskey. We spared no expense. We experimented. We drew from the world's choicest reserves. We selected the finest grains, and backed them up with the world's most delicate skills.

The result is—Fleischmann's PREFERRED, one of the world's most remarkable whiskies. Velvety! Creamy! Full! Delicious! We are sorry that we can offer Fleischmann's PREFERRED only in limited amounts as all our distilling facilities are devoted 100% to the war effort. If your dealer has Fleischmann's PREFERRED, try it! You'll always be glad you did!

THE WORLD'S GREATEST "MANHATTAN"? We say so! Take 1 dash of Angostura Bitters, ⅛ oz. sweet vermouth, and 1¾ oz. of Fleischmann's PREFERRED! Stir with ice, strain into 4-oz. glass, add one Maraschino cherry!

FOR AN "OLD FASHIONED" that tastes like cream — to ½ level teaspoon granulated sugar, 2 or 3 dashes of bitters in an Old Fashioned glass, add just enough water to dissolve sugar. Muddle! Add ice cubes, 1½ oz. of Fleischmann's PREFERRED. Garnish with cherry, twisted lemon peel, or orange and pineapple!

FLEISCHMANN'S PREFERRED BLENDED WHISKEY

FLEISCHMANN'S PREFERRED Blended Whiskey. The straight whiskies in this product are 4 years or more old; 35% straight whiskies, 65% neutral spirits distilled from grain. 90 Proof.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

War Relocation Setup To Be Put Under Ickes

War Relocation Authority will be transferred to the Interior Department and placed under the firm hand of Secretary Harold Ickes. The agency now is independent. The transfer order already has been drawn and it's reported it has been signed by the President. Anouncement of the transfer is being delayed, it's said, until the move can be discussed with Dillon S. Myer, WSA director, who is now on the West Coast and who won't return here until January 28. Myer and his staff will be given the opportunity of remaining with WRA after it loses its independence. West Coast members of Congress have demanded that WRA be reorganized following several outbreaks in its Jap enemy alien camps.

Frank C. Walker definitely won't resign as Postmaster General. His pending resignation as chairman of the Democratic National Committee has inspired reports that he'll step out of public life. . . . Herbert W. Pariseus has been appointed chief of the food and agriculture division of Foreign Economic Administration. He was formerly chief of Food Production and more recently he handled relief problems in North Africa. . . . Navy Department will give service pins to all its civilian employes who have served for at least a month. . . . Federal employment during November was at a virtual standstill. Civil Service reports that employment here dropped 299 to 265,287, while it showed an increase of 669 on a Nation-wide basis to make a total of 2,797,513.

Senator Homer Bone of Washington is one of the three members of Congress who was given that sucker list of former Federal employes who had money in the Civil Service retirement fund and which was used by a Washington law firm in an attempt to make some easy money. But the Senator still has his list and he has kept it strictly confidential. The list never has been out of his office. However, the Senator's staff was approached by a man who said he was working with a law firm that wanted the list. The request was denied most emphatically. But that isn't all.

Bone's office was contacted on January 26, 1942, by Cecil Custer, Civil Service official, who said that an attempt was being made by a law firm to work a fee racket with the list. His office promptly contacted the other Senator who was given a copy to warn him of what was up. The third Congressman is a member of the House. Moreover, Custer was advised by Bone's office to publicize the money-making venture. This was never done until the smelly affair was exposed in this column. However, the commission did write letters to the former employes to advise them that they need not hire a layer to get their money. The lawyer sent out his appeal for clients—at 20 per cent of the take—just four days after the lists were furnished members of Congress and within 10 days the commission followed up with its explanatory letter. Now the lawyer is up before the grievance committee of the District Bar Association.

Senator Bone wanted the list for a legitimate purpose. He knew some people had forgotten that they had money in the fund and he wanted it returned to them. He had planned to write to all his constituents who were on the list. No other purpose was intended. Further, Bone planned to give the list to other Senators and suggest that they do the same thing. But, his office explained, the addresses furnished the members were out-of-date and the letters were never sent. Senator Bone would have placed the entire list in the Congressional Record to make the whole thing public if the addresses had been good. Who gave the list to the law firm is still a mystery but I'll do my best to find out, as Chairman Ramspeck of the House Civil Service Committee, has announced his committee won't investigate as members of Congress are involved. He says he has no authority to investigate his colleagues.

Thirty-two young Federal employed in 18 agencies have been selected by the Institute of Public Affairs to undergo seven months of intensive training to equip them to do administrative work in the Government. The employes, selected from more than 1000 candidates, will be given rotating assignments in and out of the agencies to give them practical experience with each phase of Government work. They'll also go to school, attend off-the-record conferences, and get together each month for a discussion meeting.

Employees selected are from 23 to 26 years old; they earn from $1800 to $4600; half are men and half women; they've been in Government from two to 10 years; only have have attended college, and several are World War II veterans. They are as follows: Morris Allen, Donald A. Knowles, Eldon E. Sweezy, and Monte C. White of the War Department; Eileen M. Anderson, Garrett DeMots, and Janet E. Gift, Commerce Department; Irene Bogart, Martha E. Jaquet, and Bill Johnson, Interior; Donald Buckle, and Roy Eastin, jr., Government Printing; Julius Cahn, Central Administrative Services; Frank Cook, General Accounting; Thomas Crowell, Petroleum Administration for War; Hazel Dallas, Office of Censorship; Ann Foote, SWPC; Joe Gallagher, Post Office; Edith Griffen, Eileen Howard, and Robert Shift, Navy; Miriam Groden, War Relocation; John Haushey, Agriculture. 2-Day Bond Sale Totals $8,100,000

Bond purchases totalling $8,100,000 in the District campaign to raise $95,000,000 before February 15 were made during the first two days of the drive, the Fifth Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond announced yesterday.

While terming the report gratifying, Chairman John A. Reilly of the District War Finance Committee pointed out that the sum is but 15 per cent of the 53 million dollar individual goal set for the Nation's Capital.

"The task ahead of us is a hard one," Reilly warned. "If the marks set for Washington are to be reached there must be no let-down in our efforts. We must sustain a steady, day-by-day attack on our goal."

In Cincinnati, Ohio, Henry Morgenthau, Secretary of the Treasury, announced that the Fourth War Loan drive had produced $1,048,000,000 in individual purchases of war bonds. The goal for individual sales is $5,500,000,000 and the over-all goal, inculding institutional sales, is 14 billion dollars.

Determination Evident

Meanwhile, unofficial reports from all over the city indicated that every effort would be made to reach the goal.

Crowds yesterday continued to pour through the "American Mariner," the Liberty ship on view at Municipal wharf in numbers estimated at more than 5000. By noon yesterday the total of visitors since the ship was opened Tuesday was well above 20,000 with record bond sales in the first two days of $17,500.

Last night Ralph G. Engelsman, associate field director in charge of the national payroll saving program, presented the coveted Treasury "T" flag to the officers and crew of the vessel.

Commander Joseph H. Masse, captain of the vessel, received the award in recognition of 90 per cent participation by the ship's crew in buying bonds through the payroll savings program.

The ceremony was preceded by a concert featuring the U. S. Maritime Service Band from Sheepshead Bay, N. Y., which has been assigned to the ship for its stay here. The vessel is docked at 11th st. and Maine ave. sw., and is open to the public daily from 2:30 to 5 and from 7:30 to 10 p. m. Bond booths aboard the ship are manned by WAVES.

"Rebel" to Be "Officer"

"Andrew Jackson Rebel," the small bull terrier that accompanied Staff Sergt. Raymond Katz on 20 bomber missions in the South Pacific before his master was lost over New Guinea, will receive the honorary rating of staff sergeant in the Army Air Forces K9 Corps aboard the ship today. Mrs. Spencer Waters, chairman of the District War Dog Fund campaign, will make the presentation.

Tonight the ship's band is scheduled to play a medley of numbers in front of the Stage Door Canteen at 9:15 before marching inside for a special program which will continue until midnight.

It was announced last night that wounded soldiers broadcasting from Walter Reed Hospital over Station WWDC in connection with the drive, had raised $10,000 so far. It was requested that persons who wish to buy a bond from the soldiers call Ra. 4855, 4856, or 4857, special phones set up at the hospital. The program is broadcast each day at 6:15 p. m.

Other events scheduled for today include a rally at 4 p. m. of employes of the Washington Gas Light Co. at 1100 29th st. nw., a meeting of the International Federation of Technical Engineers Local No. 46 at the Washington Gas Light Auditorium at 8 p. m., and a dinner meeting of the Washington Federation of Business Men at the Mayflower at 6:30.

Miss Linwood Gisclard, the 1944 Maid of Cotton, yesterday wound up a two-day bond-selling program in the city with a broadcast over WRC, an appearance at the Kiwanis Club luncheon at the Mayflower Hotel, two hours of bond-selling aboard the Mariner, and a stage appearance at the Capitol Theater.

Late in the afternoon Lieut. Comdr. Toba P. Wiley, assistant director of the WAVES, at a rally held at Eastern High School, urged employes of the Maritime and the War Shipping Administration to support the men on the fighting fronts with bond purchases.

Two Pedestrians Badly Injured In D. C. Traffic

A 78-year-old man, who, before he lapsed into unconsciousness, told police his name Hugh Du Coates, was seriously injured yesterday morning when he was struck by a Capital Transit Co. streetcar in the 1200 block of New York ave. nw. He was admitted to Emergency Hospital with a fractured skull.

Police said the operator of the streetcar, Walter L. McVearry, 30, of 102 36th st. ne., told them the man had stepped out from behind a tree box into the path of the streetcar.

McVearry has had 2½ years' operating experience.

Paul Leadwell, 38, of 417 6th st. nw., suffered a skull fracture and face injuries when struck by a taxi at H and 5th sts. nw. last night. He was removed to Emergency Hospital, where his condition was described as serious. Police said the taxi was driven by John N. Scribner, 23, of 423 Massachusetts ave. nw.

In an earlier accident Leonard D. Hankin, 36, of 7737 Emerson rd., West Lanham, Md., received minor injuries when the cab he was driving struck a light pole in the 1700 block Bladensburg rd. ne. He was treated at Casualty Hospital for head and face injuries.

'Merry Wives of Windsor' Presented in Tuneful Program

By Ray C. B. Brown

C. C. Cappel presents the Nine O'Clock Opera Company in an abridged adaption of Nicolai's "The Merry Wives of Windsor" on Thursday night in Constitution Hall. The cast:

Sir John Falstaff.....Gean Greenwell
Mrs. Ford.....Alice George
Mrs. Page.....Vera Weikel
Ford.....Carlos Sherman
Fenton.....John Harrold
Pianist: Ruth Cumbie.

With a skeletonized version of "The Merry Wives of Windsor," the Nine O'Clock Opera Company demonstrated in Constitution Hall last evening the thesis that it is better to hear parts of a comic opera with piano accompaniment than to remain completely ignorant about it. With the device of a narrator to describe the missing scenes, the original three acts were condensed into two, the cast was reduced to seven, and the chorus was abolished along with the fairy ballet that ends the work. Scenery and props were as rudimentary as those on the Chinese stage, and imagination had to supply the orchestration for the solos, duets, trios, quartets and quintets culled from the score. Modern costuming dissipated the slightest illusion that the subject was an Elizabethan farce by one William Shakespeare.

The result of all this disarrangement was an entertaining glimpse at one of the most popular light operas ever written—popular, that is, in countries more operatically enlightened than the United States. Everyone is familiar with the overture on orchestral programs, but a Gallup poll would show a very small percentage of those who have ever heard a performance of Carl Otto Ehrenfried Nicolai's masterpiece. The composer himself did not hear many of them for he died two months after its premiere at the age of 39.

Selections exhibited last evening showed that the music of the opera is as tuneful, as sprightly and as attractive as the overture. Nicolai's sense of humor was keen, and like Sullivan he frequently parodied the florid Italian style, as in Mrs. Ford's aria, "Mirth and jollity are the spice of life." Some of his best humorous effects, such as the mock dirge in the second act, were absent for want of a chorus.

Singing honors in this abbreviated production were carried off by the merry wives, Alice George and Vera Weikel. The male participants were not notable for vocal finesse nor did they stand out as actors, with the exception of Gean Greenwell, who portrayed Sir John Falstaff with genial nonchalance and served as the narrator.

D.C. Taxi Licenses Reach $500 In Black Market Sale Value

Since the Office of Defense Transportation froze the number of taxis that may operate in Washington, hackers' licenses costing $25 when issued have reached black market values up to $500 in second-hand transfers, with District officials powerless to stop the practice.

Under District law, cab licenses are transferable, PUC Chairman James H. Flanagan said last night, and the ODT order freezing the number of cabs in the District to 5329 has put a premium on operating licenses.

It would take an act of Congress to make licenses nontransferable, and a subcommittee of the Senate District Committee turned down such legislation last summer, Flanagan pointed out.

PUC is insistent that the very few new licenses available under the freeze order are going to honorably discharged servicemen, the PUC chairman said. The PUC will hold the license of a hacker called into service if he will turn it in promptly, it was stated, but those two actions are about as far as the PUC can go under its present authority.

Flanagan was not certain that nontransferable licensing was the black market answer. In due time, he said, "someone is going to get stuck, but now the ingenuity of the taxi men is nowhere near exhausted."

While the black market arose from the ODT order freezing the number of cabs here below the number of applicants for licenses, the local ODT enters the picture only if it refuse sto renew a certificate of war necessity for rubber and gasoline rationing violation, thereby taking a cab out of service, and making room for another.

There is no price ceiling on taxi license transfers, and, as District officials pointed out, the only laws operating are those of the District and supply and demand.

Scout Troops, Cub Packs Urged To Join Waste-Paper Campaign

Boy Scout troops and Cub packs were urged yesterday to join the 43 Scout organizations participating in the current waste paper salvage drive by Dr. Albert K. Fretwell, Chief Scout executive.

In a letter quoted in the current Scout bulletin Fretwell asked that Scout and Cub leaders set up the machinery for troop cooperation in the drive sponsored by the D. C. Salvage Committee and The Washington Post.

Scouts were reminded of the recent proclamation of the District Commissioners calling on Washington residents to increase their contributions to the drive. At least two million tons of waste paper are needed to keep paper mills going at top speed, the Commissioners said.

Only 10 more days remain for the troops to participate in the contest for a free trip to see the mills fed by their contributions, the bulletin reminded the Scouts.

On January 31, the Salvage Committee will determine from its official collection records the five troops or packs collecting the largest amount of paper during the month. These five troops will select from their membership a representative to go on a tour of one of the largest paper mills in the East.

The Scouts will visit a mill at York, Pa., and learn how the paper they collect is turned into containers and box board vitally needed by the armed forces. The expenses of the tour on February 5 will be paid by The Washington Post.

Checks in payment for collections made through the salvage committee will be mailed to all troops on the first of the month, the committee stated. Scout troops will receive 50 cents for each hundredweight of bundle newspapers and 75 cents for magazines.

Taking Over Of Cafeterias Explained

Action by the War Department to take over full control of cafeterias in the Pentagon Building was taken because their operation by the Welfare and Recreation Association had not been satisfactory, it was stated yesterday by a War Department official.

The Welfare and Recreation Association, which operate a number of restaurants and cafeterias in Government buildings, was due to give up operation of the Pentagon cafeterias on February 29. The contract with the association was terminated by the Pentagon Restaurant Council Wednesday.

Col. H. W. Isbell, Army headquarters commandant, said that the War Department believed it should have full control over any food establishments that "serve War Department food to War Department personnel in a War Department building."

Operation Methods Considered

He said the arrangement whereby certain policies affecting Pentagon cafeterias were being formulated by a board in Washington had never been satisfactory and that it was the War Department's purpose to exercise full control over these establishments in the future, with no one able to interfere with the operation except the Pentagon Restaurant Council.

Colonel Isbell said the exact method of operating the cafeterias had not been determined. He said that any one of three means might be used, providing: (1) For the War Department to operate them itself. (2) To rent them out to a concessionaire, and (3) to hire an independent operator.

Asked what would happen to the 1200 odd employes now working in the cafeterias for the Welfare and Recreation Association, Colonel Isbell said that a broad policy would be followed as far as they were concerned. He said that practically all of them would be retained and that both the council and association had assured the employes that their union status would be protected.

Other Buildings Unaffected

Asked whether Wednesday's action would affect the operation by the association of cafeterias in other War Department buildings, Colonel Isbell replied:

"You must remember that the Pentagon is the only building that was erected for permanent use by the War Department. The other buildings now occupied by the War Department were erected merely as public buildings and might be utilized by any Government agency. This action should not affect any other building where the association operates cafeterias."

The association made this statement yesterday:

"The Welfare Association believes that relinquishing the responsibility for this operation will enable it to maintain more consistent standards and to strengthen the present service in Government buildings, including other operations in War Department buildings which will be continued by the association."

WMC to Study Questionnaire Extension Plan

The labor-management committee of the Area War Manpower Commission tomorrow will consider extension for 30 days of the deadline for "locally needed" establishments to file applications for continuance of their status.

The WMC requested Washington's 5000 "locally needed" firms, which enjoy the protection of WMC rules against "labor pirating," to answer a questionnaire to determine their adherence to WMC standards, including employment of women and minority groups, payment of established wage minimums, and other manpower rules.

Although this questionnaire was sent out in the first week of December, the WMC announced Saturday that only 38 firms had answered. Fred Z. Hetzel, area WMC director, warned at that time that employers will lose their status unless they answer by January 31.

Robert J. Wilson, executive secretary of the Washington Restaurant Association, said yesterday that he requested a 30-day extension two days ago to give members of this organization "a chance to study the situation further." He explained the delay by pointing at the new OPA rationing regulations which are "keeping restaurant people busy."

Other "locally needed" activities are hotels, food and fuel distribution, apartment and office building maintenance, and laundries, linen supply and dry cleaning establishments.

City News in Brief

Gets First Jap Zero

Maj. George H. Poske, 27, USMC, of Washington, who was public accountant before he joined the Marine Corps in the pre-Pearl Harbor days, took account of his first Jap Zero on January 10, according to an Associated Press dispatch received yesterday.

Poske brought down the Zero on his first flight from his South Pacific base since he had recovered from a broken ankle suffered in an antiaircraft hit.

A graduate of Georgetown University, Poske is the son of Mrs. Margaret B. Poske of 101 W. Bradley lane, Chevy Chase, Md., with whom he and his wife made their home.

Draft Board Dispossessed

Draft Board No. 18 has been notified to move from its quarters at 1624 H st. nw., because the rooms are to become part of a recreation center for junior officers in the armed forces. This will make move number six since the board was formed.

Ringgold Hart, chairman, said yesterday he had made no effort to find new quarters.

Impersonating Charge

A former soldier was charged before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage yesterday with impersonating a flight officer in order to obtain free medical treatment at Bolling Field.

The defendant, Edward Graham, 24, of Baltimore, pleaded not guilty and was held under $500 bond for further hearing January 26.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation said Graham was discharged from the Army and claimed he went to Bolling Field to obtain medical service from that branch of the Army where he had contracted his illness. The FBI said the charges resulted after a routine check of medical records.

Workers to Visit Ship

District employes will be released from their offices Saturday from 11 to 12:30 p. m. to visit the Liberty ship, "American Mariner," now docked at the Municipal pier in connection with the Fourth War Loan drive. District Commissioner John Russell Young notified heads of departments yesterday.

Offices will not close Commissioner Young said, but employes desiring to accompany him to view the vessel may be excused. Trainees will stage drills and demonstrations on the Liberty ship.

Student Soldiers Parade

Forty-four hundred student soldiers of Georgetown University paraded yesterday at 5 p. m. in a retreat ceremony before Frans Van Cauwelaert, Belgian Minister of State and president of the House of Representatives of Belgium. The Minister came here at the invitation of Col. Joseph S. Dougherty, commandant of the Army Specialized Training unit at Georgetown, and is the guest of the faculty of the university.

After the parade, the Minister addressed the army cadets of the foreign area and language section studying French in the School of Foreign Service.

Case 'Bounced' Out

A Municipal Court jury heard a lot about bouncing yesterday during an assault trial.

John Bullock, 25, Negro, of 1427 8th st. nw., testified he entered the Broadway "Beef" Garden, which is really called "Beer Garden," and asked for one bottle of their specialty. The bottle, however, was warm, he said, and upon protesting he was given a blow that "felt like thunder" before he felt himself bouncing on the pavement.

The bouncer, Milton Lewis, 27, said he was paid to bounce anyone who was disorderly.

The jury bounced the case out of court after a bouncing play rendered by Attorney James K. (Bounce) Hughes.

To Appeal $1 Fine

Samuel W. McCart, an attorney of 923 15th st. nw., was fined $1 yesterday in Municipal Court for parking in a restricted area. He told Judge Nathan Margold that he would appeal the case.

He was charged with parking in a restricted area on 14th st. nw., admitted seeing the sign, and in spite of this he pleaded not guilty on the ground that traffic conditions in the area did not warrant a "No Parking" sign.

James A. Donohoe, sr., real estate man who died in Providence Hospital December 29, left an estate of more than $250,000, but is said by his son, James Donohoe, jr., to have made no will, it was learned yesterday. The son, who is a lieutenant in the Navy, asked District Court for letters of administration in connection with the estate.

He said legal heirs are his mother, Mrs. Mary F. Donohoe, 5831 Chevy Chase Parkway nw.; two brothers, Richard J. Donohoe of Phillipsburg, N. J., and Robert F. Donohoe of Washington, and a daughter Jean Marie Donohoe, also of Washington.

Gallinger Phones Out

Gallinger Hospital was without telephone communication for 35 minutes yesterday when a fuse blew out on the switchboard at 11 a. m. Dr. Daniel Seckinger, superintendent, said the mishap showed need for installation of another line. Gallinger receives between 4000 and 5000 calls daily, he said, and frequently the saving of a life may depend on the speed with which a call is put through.

Bakery Enjoined

In the first action of its kind here Justice T. Alan Goldsborough of District Court issued a permanent injunction against the New York K and R Bakery, 809 4th st. sw., to prevent the firm from future violation of War Food Administration regulations.

United States Attorney Edward M. Curran and his assistant, Daniel B. Maher, said the bakery illegally distributed products on consignment and allowed the return of unsold bread from a retailer. They said that they had agreed to the injunction.

District Ends Hearings on Liquor Rules

Punctuated by frequent references to uneven distribution of liquor among retailers, which led to a suggestion that the Commissioners rule to govern distribution by wholesalers to retailers, hearings were completed yesterday with little dissent on 11 proposals to alter liquor regulations here. District Commissioners are expected to act soon.

Concerted dissent was heard only on the proposition to forbid retailers to buy on credit from wholesalers.

Milton Schwartz of the wholesale dealers association said his members favored the plan because it would help them. He said there had been some bad credit cases. However, the city's largest wholesaler, Milton S. Kronheim, said he favored credit, and although he was not now operating under it, he expected to go back to it after the war.

Harry Wechsler, president of the local liquor retailers group of 250 members, protested, "We are businessmen, and we want our credit."

John Laskey, chief counsel for local OPA, said if the retailers were not allowed credit, price ceilings would drop, but that the change would disrupt record keeping of the retailer and take away a source of information for investigators in price cases.

Counsel for Samuel Eig, local retailer, objected to a proposed regulation requiring display of 4 per cent of stock on shelves, on grounds that it would make the retailer a greater prey for the bootlegger; in would necessitate daily inventory of stock-consuming time, and it would prevent the retailer from accommodating regular customers who could not get to the store at early hours.

Bus Unions To Give WLB Strike Hint

Unions of A. B. & W. and Arnold bus drivers at meetings in Alexandria and Arlington last night agreed to serve notice on the War Labor Board they considered the bonus question in dispute, thus giving the 30-day notice required under the Smith-Connally Act after which a strike vote could be taken if the question is not settled.

Union officials will meet with the heads of two suburban transit companies this morning to start negotiations for a bonus pay system, "successfully" begun yesterday with representatives of the Capital Transit Co., in an effort to forestall a threatened strike that would tie up nearly all public transportation in the metropolitan area.

Emerging from a day-long conference, officials of the union local and the Capital Transit Co.—key to the action of the smaller companies—said that negotiations were carried on to comply with the War Labor Board ruling which asked the companies to devise a bonus system to compensate drivers for the "extraordinarily heavy loads" they are carrying during the wartime emergency.

Unwilling to be quoted, one union official said he felt "considerable progress had been made." He said he doubted very much that the union will be compelled to give the WLB a 30-day strike notice, required by the Smith-Connally Act when a work stoppage is considered.

The bonus system, recommended by the WLB, is supposed to increase employes' income in lieu of the agreed 5-cent hourly increase which the board turned down claiming it lacked justification under the stabilization law.

While flatly refusing a wage boost for Capital Transit and Arlington, Barcroft and Washington line employes, the board granted workers of the Arnold operated Washington, Virginia and Maryland line a 7 cents increase. This was half the increase demanded by the union and has been termed "unacceptable" by O. B. Hiner, president.

In the middle of the pay question the Arnold employes union inducted new officers. H. J. Harris became president, while O. B. Hiner, president up to last nights meeting, became vice president. R. Sample was installed as treasurer, E. I. Smith as secretary and Jasper Hodges as recording secretary.

Defense Gets Its Inning In WAC Case

The Army reclassification board trying WAC First Lieut. Virginia Wight completed its prosecution yesterday and the defense is scheduled to begin it case today, it was learned last night.

It was believed WAC Capt. Evelyn A. Rothrock, Lieutenant Wight's superior officer who placed charges against her, will return to the stand for further examination.

Proceedings against the 24-year-old officer remained secret. She is charged with insubordination, submitting false reports, and leaving the post without permission.

Yesterday a hard-eyed sergeant armed with an automatic guarded the door of the Signal Corps conference room at the Pentagon Building in which the hearing was in progress. Even wastepaper baskets were guarded. When they were removed an escort followed.

Lieutenant Wight's civilian attorney, James J. Laughlin, said, "there's nothing I can say. Captain Reaid is the only one who can tell you anything."

But Captain Reid, not further identified, said only, "gentlemen, this thing is elementary. The military district of Washington is adamant—there will be no publicity on this."

Woman Considers It Dangerous Social Doctrine To Assume or Imply That Biological Aspect Of Marriage Ranks With Spiritual in Importance

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I was disappointed in your answer to "Vic," published Tuesday, January 18. You are always so sound and right in your judgments that I was astonished to read your advice in this instance, which seems to impute more biological than spiritual importance to marriage. No matter what psychiatrists may say, between Christians, marriage IS sacrosanct, per se. It is a sacrament, the purpose of which is to increase the spiritual life of the contracting parties. And insofar as churches depart from this ideal,—by "liberalizing" their tenets to conform to modern social trends,—they lower the quality of marriage by increasing its quantity.

Between pagans, of course, the spiritual principle of marriage does not exist,—as the keystone of the relationship. But personally, I should prefer to marry someone who regarded marriage as more than physical union, and meant to be faithful to it all his life, "for better or for worse." I don't think I could be happy if it were merely a physical test, in which I should be discarded if found unsatisfactory. Such a concept of marriage could lead to the greatest cruelties. What of wounded soldiers coming home to their wives? Are they to be discarded,—if and when they are adjudged "unsatisfactory" mates, due to physical disabilities suffered in battle?

I know of a marriage in which the husband was impotent. The marriage could have been annulled; and, in fact, the wife's medical adviser prescribed this course. Curiously enough, the wife refused. She said she had married the man because she loved him, and slammed the door on the doctor! She then proceeded to make a happy home for the unfortunate husband, and they adopted a motherless "problem" child, who was unwanted by his father and stepmother. With love and patience, they got this child straightened out. Due to the spiritual resourcefulness of this brave, loyal woman, three lives were made happy,—when two, at least, might have ended in tragedy, if she had sought only for sex satisfaction.

Believes Sex Hunger Is Product of Thought

TO MY WAY of thinking, "Vic" is simply obsessed by the sex aspect of love. And because she has concentrated on sex, her feeling of need for it grows. Many people with other things on their mind are happy without it,—as witness war wives without husbands, temporarily; or widows; or persons dedicated to the religious life. But "Vic," being imaginatively obsessed with sex, thinks she must have it or lose her mind, and says: "I feel I need it as I do food and sleep." She adds, furthermore, that her husband's seeming indifference to her so-called distress is "slowly building a hatred of him deep in my being." And she runs from doctor to doctor for advice on her predicament.

Probably this performance is repugnant to her husband, who may have the male's ingrained attitude that women,—and particularly his wife! — should be "pure" and "above" such preoccupation. If so, her very insistence on wanting to "solve the problem," by dragging him to a doctor for consultations, may be making the situation a thousand times worse. If her husband had wanted medical advice, perhaps a doctor could have helped him. But since he sidesteps that course, it is useless for his wife to try to blackmail him into taking it, by threatening to tear up the marriage bond unless he obliges her wish.

Thinks Peace Comes To Disciplined Mind

NO PATIENT can be cured unless (1) he acknowledges his sickness; (2) wants to be rid of it; and (3) has faith that the person he goes to can help him. And since many very fine and good people do not believe in psychiatry, it is possible that "Vic's" husband doesn't, either. Since he is a free man and entitled to his own opinion, and since there is no medical dictatorship as yet (thank God), I fail to see where his heinous offense lies, in refusing to see a doctor.

My advice to "Vic" would be: Turn your thoughts into other channels, and seek other media of emotional satisfaction, such as artists, writers, scientists and humanitarians find, in doing good work for its own sake. By heroically renouncing her fundamental attitude of physical (and infantile) self-engrossment, by letting go her tenseness that has its origin in a resentful sense of personal frustration, she may even create the conditions-of-companionship in marriage that will bring her the fulfillment she desires. Since she seems reluctant to cast off her husband—which must mean that he is a likable sort of chap,—this course is certainly worth a trial; and the more especially so because, in my opinion, it is the only course she can rightly take. Sincerely yours, WAR WIFE.

Y. W. Heads To Meet Here

The executive committee of the world's YWCA will meet here at the National Education Association Building tomorrow and continue through Monday. Meetings of special committees will precede and follow these dates, one of the most important being that of the commission on reconstruction.

As usual, the attendance at these meetings will be international in character. Representatives are expected from India, China, the Philippines, Great Britain, the Netherlands, Sweden and Czechoslovakia.

Mrs. Hugo Cedergren of Stockholm is coming to the United States especially for this meeting and will bring direct messages from the world's YWCA headquarters in Geneva which she visited just prior to leaving Stockholm. Mrs. Cedergren, as official representative of the world's YWCA, has also visited refugee and internment camps for women in France and Germany.

Mrs. Cedergren is an outstanding woman leader in her country. She has served as president of the national YWCA for 18 years and is the national commissioner for the Girl Guides. She is one of a small number of women members of the Stockholm Municipal Council and was a leader in the organization of the joint committee of women's national organizations which has taken the initiative in directing government attention to many social problems, including postwar reconstruction.

Among others in attendance at the world's YWCA meeting will be Miss Ruth Rouse, president; Mrs. T. H. Brand and Mrs. Bertram Pickard, representatives of Great Britain; Miss Julia Matouskova of Czechoslovakia, Mrs. Slotemaker de Bruine of the Netherlands, Miss Emma Kaufman of Canada, Miss Lilace Reid Barnes of Chicago, Mrs. James S. Cushman, Mrs. John French, Miss Elizabeth K. Lamont and Miss Margaret E. Forsyth of New York, and Mrs. Harrie R. Chamberlin of Toledo, Ohio. Miss Maud Russell and Miss Lydia Johnson, recently returned from China, and Mrs. Wilson Hume, from the Philippines, are also expected.

WAVES Receive Technical Training at No Cost to Themselves

Undoubtedly, the war is broadening women's opportunities in industry and the professions, in civilian as well as military opportunities. In the fields of aviation, meteorology; medicine, surgery, dentistry and bacteriology, for example, they are receiving valuable technical training.

All of her schooling, of course, costs a WAVE nothing. She is paid as she learns. Though the pay for Apprentice Seaman is only $50 a month, food and quarters allowances bring the total income to $142.42. A Chief Petty Officer receives a total of $230.42 a month.

"'Let's all back the attack' is more than a slogan for the Fourth War Loan Campaign. It's our answer to Hitler and Tojo.

As we think of the men and women in our country's service, of their sacrifices, their valor and achievements, let us all resolve to strengthen our faith and effort. To sell ninety-five millions in war bonds is a program worthy of our supreme effort."

WAVES Get Training in Self-Control

Chicago, (AP).—The American girl, after serving in the WAVES awhile, "doesn't even slam a door or throw books for relief," in the opinion of her commanding officer, Capt. Mildred H. McAfee.

Captain McAfee, in an address to the Chicago Sunday Evening Club recently cited the way the girls had submitted to military discipline; scattering books, hose, lipstick and clothes brushes is no longer permissible. She knows that the extra 10 minutes abed after reveille means shirking her share of the morning cleaning.

"She suppresses the sharp word, the sarcastic remark. She doesn't even slam a door or throw books for relief."

Captain McAfee thought their training would give the WAVES "an invaluable steadiness of purpose throughout their lives."

The Conscripts

President—Ladies, we have met to decide what we will do about the proposed National Service Act.

Mrs. Flagg—I am definitely opposed to the whole thing! It's Hitlerism!

Mrs. Gimlet — Nobody's ever been able to tell me what to do. I'm just that way!

Mrs. Doodle—Madam President, I'm as patriotic as anybody, but I simply couldn't go overseas at this time. Mr. Doodle's liver's been bothering him again.

President — Ladies, don't get unduly excited. This act will mainly affect idle women.

Mrs. Joyner—Madam President, there are no idle women. Everybody's rushed to death. Take me—I've been to three committee meetings and one board meeting already today.

Mrs. Twitter—My maid quit last week and I have some company coming—

Chorus—Say, listen, I—

Mrs. Flint—I rise to a point of order.

President—Ladies, we want to do the patriotic thing in this matter. Yet we do not want to wait to be drafted and be sent to—er—factories and places like that.

Mrs. Whipper—I suggest we establish an employment bureau at once to locate our members in patriotic but also respectable and genteel occupations.

Mrs. Pry—May I inquire if all our members would come within the age limit provided in the act?

President—What is the age limit?

Chorus—Fifty . . . No, 64 . . . No, 45!

Mrs. Pry—I suggest we take a poll.

Mrs. Smart—Madam President, that would be a complete waste of time. Whatever the age limit, everyone of us will undoubtedly come within it.

Mrs. Stepp—Well, I would join the WACS or the WAVES if I hadn't gotten my fur coat for Christmas.

Mrs. Preen—Madam President, we should insist that Congress guarantee us well-cut uniforms, and that something be done about the women with figure problems if we are to go into the auxiliary services.

Mrs. Piney—I don't think I'm strong enough for any marching or drilling.

Mrs. Twitter—I'm terribly nervous.

Mrs. Blink—Will they take people with sinus trouble?

Chorus—Say I—I—

Mrs. Flint—I move we adjourn.

Mrs. Whipper—Wait! We haven't done anything about the employment bureau.

Mrs. Swagg—May I inquire just what kind of positions this bureau would place us in.

Mrs. Whipper—We—ll, er, of course we might sell—in some of the better dress shops . . . or be receptionists in offices.

Mrs. Twitter—I'm very good at meeting people and making them feel at home. I should think the Army could use me.

Mrs. Preen—Anything I did would have to be on a part-time basis. My husband expects me to do a lot of entertaining.

Mrs. Piney—I could be a camp librarian. I've always loved to browse among books.

Mrs. Swagg—I'm good at organizing, but I wouldn't want any detail.

Mrs. Joyner—Madam President I don't see how we can do anything about the employment bureau just now with our Founders' Day luncheon coming up in February.

Mrs. Whipper—We may have to call off the luncheon.

Chorus—Oh—h—h.

Mrs. Flagg—We might just as well live in Germany—or Russia!

Mrs. Blink—Madam President, we can't call off the luncheon! We have the harpist engaged and the favors ordered. And I know at least two past presidents are getting new outfits.

Mrs. McAddle—When is President Roosevelt going to draft us?

Mrs. Flint—Question!

President—Ladies, we are indeed faced with a dilemma. What shall we do about the Founders' Day luncheon?

Mrs. Whipper—I move we postpone it indefinitely.

Mrs. Flagg—I object. We can't give up all our rights.

Mrs. Joyner—I feel strongly we should not give up the Founders' Day luncheon because—well, we have always had it, and at this time it is a matter of morale and the American way of life. We also have gone to a lot of trouble, and it will be very embarrassing about the harpist and the favors. Therefore, I move that we ask Congress, in event it passes a National Service Act to defer all the members of this club until after the luncheon.

Chorus—I second the motion.

Antiaircraft Artillery Command Needs Scores of Women Workers—NOW

HERE'S ANOTHER suggestion for women who want to take a more active part in the war effort . . . and yet haven't decided where their services are most in demand.

The Antiaircraft Artillery Command needs dozens of women to plot planes—work which must be carried on around the clock so long as the defenses of Washington are manned to guard the city. In other words, for the duration. And here's the real thrill of the job: requests for workers come directly from the Army. Those who are accepted and trained must take the same oath of loyalty and secrecy as that of a soldier.

Working hours? Well, at present the daytime shifts must be filled. These run from 7 to 11 a. m., from 11 a. m. to 3 p. m., and from 2 to 7 p. m. I can't tell you any more about the work because it's all in the military-secret category; but if you have any free time and think you'd like to put it to the best of wartime use, drop in at the Office of War Information and find out for yourself about the Antiaircraft Volunteers.

THERE'LL BE LOUD wailing and gnashing of teeth around Washington when attractive Mrs. Delos Emmons takes off soon to join her husband, Lieutenant General Emmons, on the West Coast.

For five months he has been in charge of the Western Defense Command, with headquarters at The Presidio; and most of that time Mrs. Emmons has been trying to make up her mind whether to give up her apartment here and join him. Times being what they are, and an Army officer's wife having to cope with housing problems just like anybody else, she has stayed on in Washington a while until there were some signs that her husband's present command might keep him there long enough to justify her moving.

Mrs. Emmons

But last week General Emmons dropped into Washington for a brief visit, and plans were made then for his wife to join him as soon as she disposes of her apartment at The Wyoming. Their daughter, Mrs. Clayton Lee Burwell, whose marriage took place here a year ago, is also on the West Coast now. Her Naval lieutenant husband is temporarily stationed there.

Since the beginning of the war, when General Emmons left Washington to take over command of the Army's Hawaiian Department, his wife has made her home at The Wyoming. Speaking of disposing of her apartment—she certainly won't have any trouble there. Four different families had asked for it an hour after Mrs. Emmons told the apartment manager she was going to move.

DETERMINED TO SHOW that a Middle Western landlubber can hold her own in a nautical ceremony, 19-year-old Margaret Truman, daughter of the Senator from Missouri, has been poring over christening stories in newspapers for at least six months . . . to pick up pointers for herself.

Margaret Truman

She is scheduled to christen the new USS Missouri and has firmly made up her mind that at precisely the right moment the traditional bottle of champagne will crash across the new superdreadnaught named in honor of her State.

"I'll admit I don't know which end of the ship to smack—yet," she confessed brightly, "but I'll learn that in time." She'll have an excellent coach in the handsome Naval commander who has been designated as her aide for the event.

Miss Jane Lingo, daughter of Comdr. and Mrs. B. H. Lingo of Washington, will be her maid of honor. The two girls were first classmates at Gunston Hall and have remained chums up to their present days at George Washington University. They are sophomores, and members of Pi Beta Phi Sorority.

SPEAKING OF A christening dress rehearsal, as I was a few paragraphs back, reminds me—Mary Pickford, who probably has been through more actual dress rehearsals than nine-tenths of the women who christen ships, got her cues mixed considerably in Baltimore last week.

Like every other person charged with the responsibility of smashing that bottle of champagne on the first blow—lest the ship be hoodooed—America's sweetheart was nervous. The Naval officer serving as her aide stepped forward to help her; and, in keeping with custom, gave her detailed instructions as to how the bottle should be heaved. Then, he handed her the bottle; told her to grasp it firmly around the neck; and await the signal.

Miss Pickford

Pretty Miss Pickford heard the first part of the lesson but not the last. Evidently she forgot that almost every performance of importance must have a dress rehearsal. In other words, no sooner had she seized the bottle than she dashed it against the prow of the ship, and it broke to bits.

"We all got glass in our eyes, a lot ahead of time," said witty Miss Bertha Joseph, senatorial secretary who had her fling at ship sponsoring some time ago. "And then we had to wait around for another bottle of champagne to be brought over," Miss Joseph added with a chuckle. "You'd certainly think Mary Pickford, of all people, would know a dress rehearsal for what it was!"

Purely Personal

The Greek Ambassador and Mme. Diamantopoulos were hosts to a small group at a buffet supper last evening at the embassy.

Mrs. Edward Beale McLean has issued invitations to a supper in honor of Miss Margaret Sullavan, following the President's "command performance" of "The Voice of the Turtle," on Sunday evening.

Miss Bertha Noyes, world traveler and artist, will show her paintings of Oriental and American Indian types at her home at the meeting of the Society of Woman Geographers tomorrow.

The former Governor of Pennsylvania and Mrs. Arthur H. James of Harrisonburg, Pa., are Capital visitors. They are stopping at the Mayflower.

Sir Brooke Francis, K. C., Chief Justice of Bermuda, and Lady Francis will be the guests of honor at a reception to be given next Tuesday at 4:30 o'clock at the Hotel 2400 by the English Speaking Union. Sir Brooke will make a brief address. Capt. and Mrs. Chester Welles will assist in receiving.

Mrs. William J. Murphy, wife of Captain Murphy, USN, entertained at luncheon yesterday at the 1925 F Street Club in honor of Mrs. Gifford West of Chicago, who is visiting Mrs. Walter Clarkson at 2101 Connecticut ave.

Miss Carroll To Attend 15-30 Concert

Miss Madeleine Carroll, who is in Washington at the American University, where she is taking the Red Cross Training course, and friends from her class, will occupy two boxes at Saturday evening's 15/30 concert at Constitution Hall when Charles O'Connell will conduct the National Symphony Orchestra for its third program in the series.

"Being able to go to the National Symphony is one of the nicest things that has happened to me in Washington," Miss Carroll beamed when she heard about the 15/30 Concert on Saturday night. "We are so starved for good music. As a matter of fact, we can't even listen to a radio because there isn't sufficient current for radio reception where we are quartered."

Miss Carroll is especially enthusiastic over Beethoven's Eighth Symphony which Charles O'Connell and the 15/30 Committee have programmed.

"You know, if I had a choice between a bracelet from Cartiers and the 15/30 Symphony tickets, believe me," she said, "I'd take the tickets."

All "15/30ers" are invited to attend the concert. Tickets are available at the National Symphony Box Office, Kitt's Music Store, 1330 G st. nw., or at the Willard and Shoreham ticket offices.

Service Club Plans Dances For Officers

With the announcement of dates and places for its winter series of Saturday night dances, the Officers Service Club for the United Nations gives out the news also of the initiation of midweek parties, to be held each Tuesday evening, starting January 25, from 8:30 to 11:30 in the clubrooms of the Burlington Hotel.

A small charge, to cover orchestra costs, will be made. Miss Gertrude Heard is chairman for the Tuesday series, which has been scheduled because of the great popularity of the club's weekend dances.

The schedule for Saturday night dances, winter series, arranged by the Officers Club, is as follows: January 22, Mayflower; January 29, Mayflower; February 5, Willard; February 12, Mayflower; February 19, Wardman Park, and February 26, Mayflower.

These dances are open to all interested officers, whether they are stationed in Washington or transient. In addition there will be in attendance young women from the club's hostess lists. In charge of the Saturday night dances are Mrs. Clyde Parker and Mrs. Hugh J. Casey, whose husband, Brig. Gen. (Pat) Casey is on General MacArthur's staff.

The newly decorated clubrooms are popular on Sundays in particular, when officers make it a habit to drop in for various informal activities. A break in the day comes from 4 to 7 o'clock, when tea dancing is arranged every Sunday.

Parties are also planned every Friday evening at the Burlington, when an orchestra is present to provide dance music.

The valentine motif will highlight the Friday dance, February 11, for which Mrs. Clyde Parker is making special plans.

Lady Dixon to Talk on Australian Life

Lady Dixon, the wife of Sir Owen Dixon, the Australian Minister to the United States, will talk to the members of the Congressional Club and their guests about "Life in Australia" at a regular meeting this afternoon.

A group of the associate members of the Congressional Club will begin a new project in February for the benefit of officers in the armed forces who are convalescing in the Washington hospitals. There will be a small group of wounded officers from the Washington hospitals invited to the club from 8 to 11 every other Friday evening. There will be games and music and a supper will be served by the club. By inviting a different group each Friday the members hope to provide a little recreation for a number of men.

Luncheon Planned

Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, wife of the Norwegian Ambassador, will be the ranking guest at the luncheon on February 4 to be given by Mme. Kwapiszewska, wife of the Minister-Counselor of the Polish Embassy, and Mme. Rybar, wife of the Counselor of the Yugoslav Embassy.

He Dates Hostess; Twin Sister Subs; He Marries Twin

New York, Jan. 20 (AP).—An Army major met a Transcontinental and Western Airlines hostess aboard her plane and promised to telephone her for a dinner engagement after they reached New York.

When he called, however, 26-year-old Jennie Spero had a previous date, so her twin, Stella, also a hostess for the line and so much like her they often took each other's places without being detected, filled in for her.

Next Saturday Stella will be married in Lebanon or Nashville, Tenn., to the officer—Maj. Joseph G. McNay of the Army Air Forces, South Pacific fighter pilot veteran and a resident of Long Beach, Calif. Jennie will be a bridesmaid.

The twins, who come from Westfield, Mass., and who have been together all their life, will be separated for the first time when Stella makes her home in Lebanon and Jennie returns to New York.

Venezuelan President Has Crowded Schedule

The president of Venezuela, Gen. Preceding the luncheon, President Medina at noon addressed members of the Congress at the Capitol.

Today Dr. Medina will be guest of honor at a luncheon at which the Venezuelan Ambassador, Dr. Diogenes Escalante, will be host; will receive chiefs of mission of the Diplomatic Corps at Blair House at 5:30 o'clock and at 4 o'clock will hold a press conference at Blair-Lee House next door.

At the reception that the Ambassador of Venezuela and Senora de Escalante will give tomorrow afternoon at the embassy in honor of President Medina, Senora de Escalante will be assisted by her two daughters, Senora Isabel Kerpel-Fronius and Senora Maria Teresa de Bustamante, who are in Washington for the occasion.

Owing to the many restrictions imposed by the emergency the reception will be held from 5 to 7 o'clock and the guests will include only high ranking government officials, members of the diplomatic corps, friends of the Ambassador and Senora de Escalante in Washington society, and Venezuelans residing in Washington and New York.

The luncheon yesterday followed a special session of the Governing Board of the Pan American Union, held in honor of Venezuela's Chief Executive. The Secretary of State, Cordell Hull, chairman of the Governing Board acted as host at the fete which was held in the Hall of Heroes.

AIR DRIES OVAL-SHAPE CAKE OF SWEETHEART SOAP SO IT STAYS FIRM - LASTS LONGER!

SOAP LIES FLAT
WASTES INTO JELLY

Thrifty SweetHeart Soap is oval in shape—rounded top and bottom. Unlike many soaps that lie flat, SweetHeart's big oval cake touches the surface in only one small part. Thus air dries it off fast . . . helps avoid wasteful "jelly" in the wet soap dish . . . and SweetHeart Soap stays in one firm piece down to a tiny fragrant sliver. Among eight leading brands only long lasting SweetHeart Soap is oval in shape.

MARTHA ELLYN'S PLATTER CHATTER

Brown Point Shortage Proves No Major Calamity; Delectable Meals Are Still Possible Without Them

Do you want to smile at your short supply of brown ration points? Do you want to impress your in-laws, friends and other persons who like a square meal?

Martha Ellyn

There is a way to delicious, nutritous meals without standing at the doorway of your home and grabbing off coupons as your guests enter. If you have a quarter pound of butter—or its equivalent in brown stamps—you can entertain a weekend guest, or even two, by planning your menus wisely.

Supposing your guest arrives late Saturday afternoon, and will be with you until Sunday afternoon. That means you would have Saturday dinner, Sunday breakfast or brunch, and a rousing good dinner on Sunday.

Don't moan if the sum total of your brown points is low. Plan other foods which do not require ration points and then let the brown points fall where they will do the most good.

Saturday night dinner should be planned so there will not be leftovers.

Saturday Dinner

Chilled Vegetable Juice
Baked Beans
Asparagus Vinaigrette
Calavo-Grapefruit Salad
Muffins Apple Butter
Gingerbread Baked Pears
Coffee

How does this menu add up for points? Very low. Let's analyze the foods. The point value on vegetable juice is low. Step up the flavor with a dash of celery salt, tabasco sauce, and other condiment of your preference.

OPA Good News

Now as to the baked beans: It was good news recently when OPA removed quick-frozen baked beans from the list of rationed foods. These beans are the nearest to the kind that Boston made famous. One carton will serve three persons. But if you think your diners will have ravenous appetites, it will be better planning to buy several cartons of the beans—the reason being that these baked beans are of superior flavor and quality.

If you want to make additions to them, do so. A slice or two of bacon, an odd and end of ham or other pork you may have left over in the refrigerator will do. Bury a small onion in the bean pot or casserole, add a tablespoon or so of molasses (the cooking kind) and then set the beans in a 350-degree-oven to bake for about half an hour. You will learn that this is the easiest and best way to bake beans you have ever experienced.

Calavos, those vitamin-laden fruits which California contributes, are especially good just now. Be sure and get the ones ready for serving, or buy ahead of time and keep at room temperature for a few days. The best way to test for ripeness is to press the fruit gently between the palms of hands. Do not pinch, as this will bruise the fruit. If hard, keep at room temperature a few days. When just a little soft it is not quite ready, so hold a little longer at room temperature. When the calavo yields readily to gentle pressure, if held between the palms it is at its "eating best." The calavo, like apples, peaches or bananas, may darken if exposed to air for a long period. So prepare the fruit as near to serving time as possible. Lemon juice may be squeezed over the fruit to prolong its fresh appearance if it must be prepared in advance.

This fruit does not require a salad dressing. The juice of the lime will bring out its delicious flavor. And the supply of limes just now is especially good.

If you haven't used the new muffin-mix, do so when you prepare a meal of this kind. You will be delighted with the tender product obtained with so little effort. Gingerbread, too, made with the ready-mix is a prize-package dessert.

Bake the pears whole with sugar, whole cloves, sugar and water. Bake at 300 degrees until tender but firm. A splash of grenadine won't do the pears any harm and will give an appealing color.

So ends a Saturday night dinner that should please. Please note this menu requires no brown points unless it is for butter to eat on the muffins. And the muffins served with fragrant apple butter won't necessarily require butter.

How to Put On Weight In the Right Places

(Continuing her series of articles for women who want to get in trim today Ida Jean Kain again directs her thoughts toward the thin girls. If you're in that category, her suggestions will help you to gain a nice "assortment of curves.")

By Ida Jean Kain

If you ask your brother, it's that scrawny look about the thin girls that leaves men cold. Most emphatically, the masculine preference is for girls who "are not thin and not fat; just right, with curves."

You can put on the requisite padding with a weight-gaining diet. But you want a nice assortment of curves. You want to straighten your shoulders and improve the bust contour, firm the muscular girdle and maybe nip in the waist. You want to beautify your thighs and keep the new weight from going to your hips.

That's quite a lot, but you can do all of it with exercise. Start easy, and concentrate on accuracy. Then gradually increase until you are doing a real workout of 15 to 20 minutes a day. Here is your program.

For Straight Shoulders and Curves

Get out the ironing board and prop up the small end on a footstool or low chair with other end resting on floor and against a wall so it can't slip. Lie on your back on the board with head up, feet down. You should be able to move your arms freely at the shoulders.

First, bend arms with elbows straight out at sides in line with shoulders, hands just above chest. Clench fists and work your shoulder muscles to pull hands apart and elbows back and down. Hold, relax, repeat. Then rest hands on shoulders, elbows straight out at sides again, and make backward circles with elbows. To do this, you have to move your shoulders.

In fact, the idea of exercising on the board is to force shoulder muscles and pectoral muscles supporting the bust to do all the work.

For a Trim Midriff

Lie on back on board, feet up and head down. Flex alternate knees to chest as you press small of back to board; then keep both legs straight and raise alternately to right angles with hips, again pressing small of back down flat against board. Both of these firm the muscular girdle.

To trim the waist at the same time, lie on back on floor with knees flexed and feet on floor, press small of back to floor, twist hard at waist and, keeping knees together, lower thighs to floor. Repeat to other side.

For Slim Hips, Lovely Thighs

Lie on side on floor, legs straight down and one on top of the other. Swing top leg up in front and away up and out in back. Keep swinging! Relax, and circle top leg from the hip in wide up and back circles. Relax for a full minute, and turn over on other side to repeat. The swinging slims the hips and the circling improves the thighs.

He's Inventor Of 1000 Games; Works On at 80

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

The grand old man of games, George Parker, today at the age of 80 has about 1000 game inventions to his credit. And he's still inventing games in his home at Salem, Mass.

He thought up his first game while he was still in high school, and on the strength of it he went into the game business then and there. This same firm is still going strong.

One of his masterpieces was ping-pong, which he introduced in the nineties. It is, of course, based on tennis, but the table version hinged on Mr. Parker's invention of a suitable ball. The million-dollar name was acquired in his London office, and no one seems to remember who thought of it.

Another game of the nineties which is enjoying a revival today is Pit, the first of the games based on business speculation. Mr. Parker got the idea from the Chicago wheat pit scandal of the nineties.

Camelot, which he introduced in the 1920's, has had an enormous revival of interest since the start of the present war.

The reason is said to be its strategical similarity to the principles of hand-to-hand combat taught to our service men.

Yet Camelot is based on Mr. Parker's youthful interest in chivalry and the jousting meets of knights in armor. He spent many years working out a game technique that incorporated these same points of strategy. The result is a game that requires more strategical skill but less mathematics than chess and so is easier to play.

Arkansas Society to Give Reception and Dance

The Arkansas State Society will hold its annual winter reception and dance tomorrow night in the Congressional Ballroom of the Hotel Statler. Music will be furnished by Jack Morton's Statler band.

T. Roy Reid, president of the society, invites all Arkansas to attend, regardless of whether they are on the society's membership rolls.

Colds Menace Both Beauty and Health

Hollywood.—Colds not only menace health but menace beauty," says Wally Westmore, director of make-up for Paramount studios.

"An acid condition invites colds and destroys skin beauty. Frequent glasses of hot lemonade are excellent to offset that condition. If you have been unlucky enough to contract a cold, you may even add a fourth or a half teaspoon of baking soda to increase alkalinity.

Says Westmore, "Make it a rule to keep healthy with a before-breakfast drink of fresh lemon juice and warm water. It not only stimulates the system in a natural way, acting as a beauty protective, but guards against possible cold infection."

Fats Make Lubricants

Used household fats yield glycerin—glycerin makes explosives. Approximately 2 pounds of used household fats are required to make the ingredients for one incendiary bomb.

Without the 2 million pounds of fat consumed monthly in metal-working and lubrication greases, there would be no precision tools to make war implements.

RITTER

Your Baby and Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

"Some habits developed by the 2 to 3-year-old cause the parent no end of concern and amazement. So often, these habits seem actually painful, yet the child indulges in them with every evidence of enjoyment.

Some of these inexplicable habits have to do with the child's own body. Eye-blinking, lip-sucking, ear-pulling and head-bumping are some of the most frequent.

Another has to do with bed-rocking with the child on his knees, staying awake for hours at a time while he rattles and bounces the bed about the room, the house shakes and the family slowly goes crazy.

One mother told me that when her boy began head-bumping she said to him, one day, quietly, "If you like to bump your head, I'll help you." At which she took hold of his head and quite unemotionally began bumping it up and down on the floor exactly as he had been doing.

He looked at her in surprise, stopped bumping his head and never tried it again.

May Be Habit, Not Temper

If the head-bumping is a habit, not an exhibition of temper, this might work well. But chiefly what every mother has to admit is that a child can, since it is his own body, perpetrate these acts upon it whether we disapprove and deplore or punish. We can't be on guard every minute of the day and the means for indulgence are always right at hand.

Knowing this, our discouragement should be directed not at the habit itself, but at the conditions which might have inspired the habit. Most of the sucking habits are hangovers from babyhood.

Find the Real Reason

Those indulged in at bedtime, may be discouraged by seeing that bedtime and sleeptime are practically synonomous. Reading to a child, offering him a cuddly toy at bedtime, may put him in a sleepy mood and wean him from indulgence in a habit designed chiefly to woo sleep.

The bed-rocking seems to indicate that, for some reason, the child is waking at night, not to indulge, but indulging because he is awake. While we fasten the bed to the floor so that its perambulations may be balted, we work to discover why the child is waking at night.

1944 Fashion Shows Reveal Varied Styles

By Dorothy Roe

New York (AP).—Peekaboo blouses of World War I have become 'pin-up styles" in World War II, but the principle is the same.

Nettie Rosenstein's gala night opening, climaxing the second day of New York's spring fashion previews, highlighted naked necklines and almost-bare torsos in her series of spicy short dinner gowns.

Black is the favorite color for the after-dark knee-length dress, with skin tight skirt and transparent top of filmy black lace or marganza, sometimes sprinkled with sequins or rhinestones.

The low "picture" neckline is important in all the new short formal styles, cut both low and wide. Important in the small group of long dinner gowns was a black and beige polka-dot print, its huge coin dots covered with outsize sequins.

Samuel Kass introduced sequinned prints for daytime wear in his showing.

Many Soldiers Suffer Mental Breakdowns

By Logan Clendening, M.D.

IT TAKES no great demand on the imagination for the civilian to realize what stress and strain the mind and the emotions of the soldier or sailor have to endure under modern conditions of warfare.

Indeed my observation is that the civilian population thinks about it more than anything else. "How do they stand it?" "How do they endure the strain?" Those are the remarks we hear about us all the time.

It is no great wonder to us, then, to learn that a large number do break. We still have 67,000 mental and personality casualties of World War I in our Veterans' Hospitals and 10,000 men a month are being currently discharged from the Army for psychiatric reasons, according to the magazine Fortune.

There are two features of this situation that should be remembered by the public. The first is that these people are really sick, even if they have no wounds or organic disease.

It is common practice even among some medical men to say "Oh, there's nothing the matter with him!" What they mean is that there is nothing organic the matter. But that doesn't mean that the trouble is not real, or that these men are fit for duty, because they are not.

General Patton's Attitude

That seems to have been the attitude of General Patton, for instance, and it must be of many others. General Patton didn't seem to think that a medical officer could tell whether a man was fit for duty or not, but his rugged intuition could.

That hard common-sense attitude has been the greatest bar to the proper handling of these cases. A few of the shocked soldiers are fakers, but an experienced psychiatrist can usually spot them.

The second point is that the neuroses of war are the same as the neuroses of peace.

War simply supplies the strain and stress that finds the breaking point. If in civilian life some such stress came along the indvidual would crack just the same.

Appropriate Name

Objections to the name "shell shock" for these conditions have been voiced, but until a better name comes along, that World War 1 diagnosis will do quite well. It is true many of them have never been near a bursting shell, but that was true in World War 1 also.

The soldiers call them "eight balls" because Section VIII Army regulations provide for discharge for such cases. Or they are "barrack wacky," or "bomb happy." Air men have "Zeroitis." The coast guard has "convoy jitters."

The symptoms show that "jitters" is a good word for them. They have tremblings. They are unable to concentrate. They are so alert to noises and movements that they seem to keep a constant vigil. Then there comes on a personality change. They are depressed, intolerant of argument, morose, and they assume a feeling of guilt for what is going on.

Of course the draft boards try to screen out these men before they are inducted, and many of them can be made useful for other than combat duty.

Treatment for rehabilitation is carried out by the medical corps, using rest, extra feeding, occupational therapy, discussions with the psychiatrist and all forms of psychotherapy. The idea is not so much to return these men to duty, but to prepare them for usefulness on their discharge to civil life.

Salvaged Fats Have Many Uses

Ninety million pounds of tallow are required annually for the production of synthetic rubber. This synthetic rubber is keeping our jeeps, tanks, trucks, and planes running for victory.

Glycerin from fats is indispensable in a great many drugs and pharmaceutics, ranking with water and alcohol as one of the most common ingredients in drugs.

The Army now uses the entire output of an insecticide repellant that includes fatty acids recovered from used household fats and greases. This repellant is responsible for protecting our soldiers on the battle front from disease-carrying insects.

WHAT'S ALL THIS TALK ABOUT "SLOW-CURED" SPAGHETTI?

Your first taste will tell you why women are so excited about San Giorgio Spaghetti. Here is spaghetti so good folks pass their plates for more—quick! You see, every ounce of San Giorgio is "slow-cured"... set aside in the finishing to mature in Nature's own time. And nothing proves the value of "slow-curing" like the eating. You'll discover "slow-curing" means finer, firmer texture—never soggy. And fuller flavor—never tiring. San Giorgio is another name for "sure hit."

Ask your grocer for San Giorgio Spaghetti—and Macaroni and Noodles. Here's a recipe you'll be delighted with:

SPAGHETTI ROYALE

½ lb. San Giorgio Spaghetti
1 lb. frankfurters
one onion diced fine
4 tbsps. fat
⅔ cup condensed tomato soup*
1 tsp. salt
dash of pepper
2 cups hot water

Cook spaghetti until tender; drain. Slice frankfurters thin. Saute with onions in fat. Add tomato sauce, seasonings and water. Stir in 2 tbsp. flour paste. Simmer about 20 minutes until sauce thickens. Place cooked spaghetti in serving dish. Pour sauce over spaghetti. Mix lightly. Serves 4.
*This recipe will be even better if you use San Giorgio Spaghetti Sauce, a perfect blend of tomato paste, imported olive oil, selected vegetables, spices and seasonings.

Grain Needed for Bread, WCTU Head Tells Liquor Probers

By the Associated Press

The president of the Women's Christian Temperance Union told the Senate's Special Liquor Investigating Committee yesterday that "the world is hungry for bread but the liquor interests would use wheat as well as corn" to make alcoholic beverages.

Mrs. Ida B. Wise Smith made these charges against the distillery interests:

That they are fostering advertising to make members of the armed forces "the prey of the liquor interests."

That one concern sponsored the sale of egg-nog in department stores with a view to luring women to drink alcohol.

Small of stature, the 71-year-old WCTU president, dressed in blue with a perky little hat from which a feather protruded, read rapidly from publications of the liquor and brewery trade.

She asserted that the liquor interests' own publication showed that distillers were hampering the war efforts.

"They take a full-page advertisement in the newspapers despite the newsprint shortage in the interests of inducing a holiday from industrial alcohol making in order to make more whisky," she declared.

Stifling a sob as she dabbed a handkerchief to her eyes, she added:

"The trouble is that the world is hungry for bread, but the liquor interests would use wheat as well as corn."

Almost crying again, she said that as a lover of humanity she could not help being sad "when I know all that is being done to our armed forces to make them the prey of the liquor interests."

Senator Ferguson (Republican) of Michigan said yesterday that the committee would seek to develop whether "any high OPA or other administrative officials" are on the payrolls of big distillery interests.

"So far, we haven't developed anything of that sort," Ferguson told a reporter, "but some of the price-fixing and other regulations appear so advantageous to the 'Big Four' that we want to see why."

The "Big Four" distillers are Seagram's, Hiram Walker, Schenley's and National Distillers.

The committee has been investigating the acquisition by these four organizations not only of small distillers, but of California wineries and of breweries as well.

Japanese Fighters Improving, Raid Commander Says

South Pacific Airbase, Jan. 19 (delayed) (AP).—Japanese fighters who engage Allied planes in raids on Rabaul these days "are as good as we ever encountered in the South Pacific," says Lieut. Col. W. H. Councill, Fort Valley, Ga.

The commander of an Army fighter group said one of our best squadrons lost eight P.-38's in a single sweep recently — "the heaviest loss we ever took."

"The Japs are smart," Council continued. "They time their attacks well. They hold formation better. It's no second team in there now."

Big Guns Duel Across Channel

London, Jan. 20 (AP).—British coastal guns, which were officially credited with sinking a large Nazi vessel near Cap Gris Nez, early today opened fire on German shipping in Dover Strait tonight for the second time within 15 hours.

The first shelling began shortly after dawn, when shore batteries, blazing at a convoy trying to slip out of a French Channel port, brought retaliation from German long-range guns. The duel continued spasmodically for almost three hours.
